Dillon Rules Out Tax Slash Now

Hints He Favors Cut If Loopholes Can Be Plugged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas Dillon, a Republican picked as secretary of the Treasury by President-elect John F. Kennedy, Wednesday ruled out any immediate plans for a temporary tax cut to spur the sagging economy.

But Dillon left the door open for such a possibility in the future. And he indicated he would like to see income taxes—particularly in the high brackets—slashed permanently if the money lost by that can be replaced by closing tax loopholes.

In testimony Wednesday to the Senate Finance Committee, which is considering his nomination, Dillon assured the senators that he regards as sacred the traditional power of Congress over taxes.

Power Shift Up To Congress

Dillon said Congress would have to decide whether to give the president power to fix tax rates to cope with changes in the nation's economy, as recommended to Kennedy by one of his task forces. Dillon said it would be most unusual for Congress to delegate its taxing authority to the executive branch.

The committee was the first to start informal hearings on Kennedy's Cabinet appointments, which can't be formally submitted until after he becomes president. But unless there is an unexpected hitch, all 10 Cabinet selections are generally expected to be ready for Senate confirmation as soon as Kennedy submits their names.

Served Under Eisenhower

Dillon, one of two Republicans selected by Kennedy for his Cabinet, is a New York investment banker. He served in the outgoing Eisenhower administration as undersecretary of state.

Some Republicans have expressed concern that Dillon, as a Republican, might serve as a "fall guy" in the new Kennedy regime. And some Democrats have privately wondered whether Dillon might try to slow down some of the economic and welfare programs pledged by their party.

The hearing was in a friendly atmosphere with no outspoken opposition.

Uruguay Police Seize 131 Reds In Wake Of Riot

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP)—Police stormed headquarters of the Communist party Wednesday and seized 131 persons in a drive to check demonstrations supporting Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

The campaign has been building up for months. It reached a climax Tuesday night when one man was killed and scores were injured in battles between pro-Castro elements.

A huge demonstration has been called for Thursday by Communists and other Castro partisans. The army and the police were mobilized to head off further violence.

About 1,000 leftists marched on an anti-Castro rally of 3,000 in Independence Square, in front of government house, Tuesday night and tried to break up their meeting. Police chased the leftists through the downtown avenues. The fighting spread through an area of 20 blocks.

The rioters used sticks and stones. The police threw tear gas. Some shots were heard. Storefronts were shattered and some of the injured were hurt seriously. More than 50 rioters were arrested.

Then leftists gathered in front of Communist headquarters. An anti-Castro partisan who appeared was beaten unconscious.

When the man died, the leftists fled into the building. Police took up positions around the building with orders to arrest anyone who came out.

Wednesday morning a judge ordered the police into the building to search for the man's killers. Among those arrested were 15 women political and labor leaders. Police said they found small arms and subversive pamphlets.

Red Hit As Bullet Spans Iron Curtain

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin police said Wednesday one of their men accidentally fired a rifle while loading it and apparently wounded a Communist policeman in East Germany.

A police spokesman said the shot went off inside a police hut at suburban Lichtenrade, went through the wall and across the border.

Production Lag Hits Cuba; Too Many Soldiers

HAVANA (AP)—Cuban agencies have appealed for volunteers to help in sugar and industrial production, lagging because of the call-up of thousands of worker-militiamen.

Battalions of women, children and retired workers are sought to fill the gap while Fidel Castro's citizen soldiers remain on war footing against what he calls the threat of invasion from the United States.

Announcements indicated the volunteers are expected to work without pay as a contribution to Castro's revolution. Regular workers summoned for militia duty receive wages from their employers while in uniform.

It is 12 days since Castro mobilized the island's workers from farms and factories and the natural result has been a slump in all forms of production.

Newspapers and radios broadcast appeals for young and old to join work battalions to harvest Cuba's sugar crop—mainstay of a faltering economy—and help man factories and mills.

The National Federation of Sugar Workers, many of whose 500,000 members are on duty in militia units, called on all Cubans "including retired workers and children" to sign up for emergency jobs. Cane-cutting has started and grinding is under way in this first annual sugar season completely under government control.

A group of government-operated textile mills announced the enlistment of "patriotic brigades of volunteer workers" to help maintain output of cloth.

Ex-Nazi Faces Trial

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP)—Charges of murder were made Wednesday against a former brigadier general of the Nazi SS Elite Guard in the wartime massacre of more than 2,000 Lithuanian and Ukrainian Jews. The officers, Erich Ehrlinger, and seven other lesser ranks of the dreaded SS will probably face trial here this fall.

Program Speedup, Better Leadership Called Imperative

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The United States will probably lose the race to fire a manned space vehicle into orbit around the earth, President-elect John F. Kennedy's space task force reported Wednesday.

The group called for an urgent effort to develop a more powerful thrust for spacecraft—the field in which the Soviet Union has been consistently ahead—and said better leadership of the whole military and civilian space program is imperative.

Missile Lag Reported

Kennedy headquarters here made the task force report public without saying what Kennedy thought of it—but announced naming of the task force chairman, Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist Jerome B. Wiesner, to be the incoming President's special assistant for science.

Kennedy returned to the family home in Palm Beach early Wednesday after flying down from a busy half-day in Washington, which included delivery to him of the space report.

Kennedy Calls On Hoover

His engagements were a golf game and a call on former President Herbert Hoover, who came to Florida for the dedication of a dike named for him.

His only announced business for the next few days is work on the address he will deliver at his inauguration Jan. 20.

However, appointment of George W. Ball as undersecretary of state for economic affairs, completing the top echelon of the new State Department, was announced. Ball, a Washington lawyer specializing in international practice, is also a close political associate of Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential candidate who will become ambassador to the United Nations in the new administration.

Kennedy Plans TV Press Quiz

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—John F. Kennedy will hold the first presidential news conference to be televised live on Jan. 25, five days after his inauguration.

His press secretary, Pierre Salinger, said Wednesday arrangements have been made for the conference to be carried over the three television networks and their associated radio networks, the Mutual radio network and independent outlets.

The conference will begin at 6 p.m. EST. Salinger said the broadcasting companies are reserving one-half but that the length of the conference, as has been customary, will be determined by the newsmen who ask the questions.

Salinger said the conference will be in the auditorium of either the Commerce or State department building in Washington.

President Eisenhower has held his news conferences in the ornate Victorian Treaty room in the old State Department building. Newsmen have criticized the acoustics there.

Hemingway Treated For Hypertension

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Novelist Ernest Hemingway's ailment was described as hypertension by a spokesman Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic, where the 62-year-old author has been under treatment since Nov. 30.

Hemingway is to be released after the next two weeks. His condition is considered satisfactory.

While he has received medical treatment, Hemingway has not required surgery and none is contemplated, the spokesman said.

Rocket-Toting U.S. Planes Aid Laotian Cause

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Four U. S.-made T6 observation planes, armed with rockets and machine guns, took off Wednesday for the two main fronts of the Laotian civil war.

No responsible officer would say whether the planes, donated as part of the U. S. military support program for Laos, were on combat missions or simply making a show of strength.

Laotian officers said they were sent to the area of Vang Vieng, an important rebel base between Vientiane and the royal capital of Luang Prabang to the north, and to the strategic Plaine des Jarres in north-central Laos.

Unconfirmed reports said they had returned with rockets gone and guns empty from an attack on the Vang Vieng airstrip, rearmed, and took off again.

The planes are the first potential fighter planes in the air force. They can carry two 100-pound bombs each, and can be used for strafing or bombing.

The Laotian government hinted it might turn them against Soviet planes now airlifting arms and ammunition to the leftist rebels of Capt. Kong Le in the Plaine des Jarres area.

Ike's State Of Union Message Due Today

He is expected to follow his past practice of dealing largely in generalities in the message, with specifics reserved for his budget message which will go to Congress next Monday.

Two days later Eisenhower will submit his final economic report. It will be his last major message to Congress before leaving office Jan. 20.

Censorship Imposed By Haiti Government

PORT - AU - PRINCE, Haiti (UPI)—The government Wednesday imposed official censorship of news dispatches leaving and entering Haiti. There was no immediate explanation for the restriction.

The new development came within 24 hours of Haiti's expulsion of Msgr. Remy Jerome Augustin, auxiliary bishop of Haiti, and four other Roman Catholic priests on undisclosed charges.

Navy Building Guard On Shooting Spree Kills Two, Ends Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A guard at the Navy Building shot down his wife and two coworkers Wednesday, fired several shots at a doctor, and then put a bullet in his own head.

The death toll was three: the guard, the wife, the doctor.

Before ending his life, the guard John Pledger, 40, told an old friend: "I shot Zelma. I shot Dr. Gregory. I did. I did. I shot someone else, but I don't know who."

Pledger, a uniformed guard at the main Navy Building, entered the office of the Bureau of Ships in an adjoining building.

His estranged wife, Zelma Pledger, 32, worked in an alcove in that office.

Augustus Valentine, 37, and Theodore Wells, 38, two of Mrs. Pledger's coworkers, also were in the alcove when the 6-foot, 200-pound Pledger entered.

He began shooting at his wife, from whom he was legally separated a year ago. In obtaining the separation, Mrs. Pledger had charged that her husband had threatened twice to kill her.

Wells tried to leave, but Pledger, carrying two pistols, slammed the door. He fired one bullet. It struck no one. Wells reopened the door and ran down the corridor. Pledger fired three times. One bullet went through Wells' arm and chest.

Then Valentine tried to flee. Pledger fired twice. Two bullets struck Valentine in the back.

Mrs. Pledger tried to escape. Pledger fired three more bullets. They struck his wife, and she fell in the corridor.

Pledger left the building, and drove off. He stopped to phone the General Services Administration, the agency which acts as custodian for all government buildings and, thus, his employer.

Pledger reported the shootings but assured the GSA he had not used his government gun.

Pledger stopped a few blocks away from the Navy Building at the office of Dr. Monroe G. Gregory, 50, of Annapolis, Md. He and Gregory scuffled.

Pledger's gun fired. Gregory was shot three or four times in the upper arm, left hand, and chest. Five slugs struck the wall of the room.

Pledger then went to the home of a long-time friend, Cora Green, 71. After telling of the shootings, he left the home of Mrs. Green and walked around the corner into a vacant lot. Mrs. Green called police. Pledger fired one more shot from his .38-caliber pistol.

Jackie Will Restrict Inaugural Activities

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — On advice of her doctors, Mrs. John F. Kennedy will restrict her participation to main inaugural ceremonies and festivities in Washington next week.

Pierre Salinger, press secretary to the president-elect, said in announcing this Wednesday that the next first lady is having a normal recovery from the Caesarean birth of a son Nov. 25.

Georgia In Last-Ditch Fight Against Integration

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI)—State police used tear gas Wednesday night to break up a demonstration by rock throwing students outside the dormitory of a Negro coed at the University of Georgia.

MACON, Ga. (AP)—Weary attorneys for the state move back into federal court at Macon Thursday for a last-ditch fight against decrees which have brought integration to the previously all-white University of Georgia and written new pages for the history books.

The lawyers headed by the segregationist attorney general, Eugene Cook, will plead with U. S. Dist. Judge W. A. Bootle to dissolve an injunction which kept Gov. Ernesto Vandiver from closing the 175-year-old university at Athens Tuesday, until a conflict between state and federal laws could be ironed out by legislative action.

Vandiver and the attorneys have been thwarted at every turn for six days in their crusade to either preserve segregation or, if it must be killed, let the state itself do the killing.

The governor, before issuance of Bootle's order was prepared to close the university until next Monday. He said in the interim the legislature could repeal a section of law providing that no state funds can be used to operate an integrated college.

State officials predicted Wednesday that a decision by Bootle to make the injunction permanent would be coupled with a decision that the state law is void. That would do away with any moves to repeal it.

Vessel Carrying Emigres Sinks; 40 Feared Dead

GIBRALTAR (AP) — A small Spanish-owned vessel believed to be carrying about 40 illegal emigres bound from Morocco to Israel foundered in heavy seas off the North African Coast Wednesday.

Rescue vessels in the western Mediterranean reported Wednesday night they had picked up three crewmen survivors and bodies of 23 men, women and children.

Moroccan officials said the craft was taking Jews without exit permits from Melilla to Israel via Gibraltar.

They said heavy seas drove it onto hidden reefs off Alhucemas where it sank about 10 miles off the coast.

The craft was identified as a 65-foot motor vessel registered in Honduras and owned by Spaniards. It carried a Spanish crew.

Spanish reports had indicated the mayor of Gibraltar, J.A. Hassan, and his family might have been aboard as cruise passengers but they were located later at his residence. Hassan, who is Jewish, expressed deep regrets over the sinking.

Algeciras coastal radio, in nearby Spain, said reports from rescue vessels said the ship, named the Price, sprang a leak in the bow and sank within minutes in the Bay of Alhucemas. The bay is about 150 miles southeast of this British crown colony at the tip of Spain. The radio said the suddenness of the leak prevented the Price from sending a distress call.

The traffic in transporting Jews from North Africa to Israel has increased lately since curbs on Jews have become stricter in Morocco.

Debate Cutoff Question Sent To Committee

Issue Sidetracked By Vote Of 50-46; Blow To Liberals

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate voted 50-46 Wednesday to refer its fight over filibusters to the Rules Committee.

Thus the Senators tossed aside the hot potato they have been juggling since Congress convened on Jan. 3.

The action was taken on the plea of Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, who urged that the way be cleared for prompt consideration of the Kennedy administration's program.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois supported Mansfield's motion, but the assistant Republican leader, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, called it "a tragic mistake."

Party Lines Broken

On the vote, 18 Republicans and 32 Democrats, including a solid line of Southern members, backed Mansfield. Against them were 31 Democrats and 15 Republicans.

It was the first Senate roll call vote of the session.

Senators seeking a change in rules that would make it easier to stop filibusters rated the action a setback. They felt they were in a better position strategically at the start of a new session, when rules are being adopted, than they will be later.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N. M., author of one proposal to modify the rules, told the Senate as the vote approached that "there will be no amendment unless we do it here and now."

"Repercussions" Predicted

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., predicted the vote "will have major repercussions on policy and politics.

"There will be a rockier road ahead for civil rights and other needed legislation—and for the 'New Frontiers'—because of it," Javits said.

The New Yorker was one of a bipartisan group of 23 Senators backing a proposal to permit debates to be limited by the vote of 51 senators, or a majority of the 100 members.

The rule they wanted changed requires a two-thirds majority vote to invoke a time limit on debate.

Rayburn Offers "Painless Way" To Resolve Row

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Sam Rayburn Wednesday came up with what he called "the painless way" to resolve a liberal vs. conservative row over the House Rules Commitee.

Instead of ousting one conservative, the plan calls for adding two more liberal Democrats to the committee, plus another Republican.

As outlined to newsmen, the compromise endorsed by Rayburn would avoid the purging of Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., from his top ranking place on the committee.

However, Colmer, who bolted the Kennedy-Johnson ticket last fall, and Chairman Howard W. Smith, D-Va., stand to lose their battle against dilution of their power through enlargement of the committee's membership.

"I'm for this plan because I think it would be painless for everybody," Rayburn said.

Rayburn said the compromise plan for ending a row that has simmered since Congress convened last week will be submitted to a Democratic caucus next week and he expects overwhelming approval.

Under the plan, Rayburn and other Democratic leaders would appoint two more Democrats and the Republicans would be given one more seat on the committee.

However, if the two new Democrats named by Rayburn are liberals as expected, Smith and Colmer no longer would be able to team up with Republicans on the committee to block or delay liberal-backed legislation of the kind which President-elect John F. Kennedy has endorsed.

Chair Rules SS Health Plan Conference Victor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the White House Conference on Aging had to settle a disagreement Wednesday among delegates over the medical bills of older people.

Chairman Robert W. Kean, former New Jersey Republican congressman, in effect declared those favoring a Social Security health insurance plan the winners.

As a result, it's expected such a plan will become a part of a final report from the conference which will be submitted to President-elect John F. Kennedy and Congress.

Kean made his ruling after two sections of the conference took opposing stands, one voting that Congress enact a health insurance plan tied to Social Security and the other voting that present legislation was adequate.

The difference resulted from the peculiar structure of the conference, which gives the right to make final recommendations to 20 different sections of delegates.

Each section was given the responsibility of making recommendations on different aspects of the problems of the nation's older reneration.

The entire conference of 2,700 delegates will not vote on recommendations.

The vote favoring the Social Security approach was taken by the section on income maintenance—the one which conference officials had formally given the task of making recommendations on financing medical care for the edlerly. The vote was 176-99.

The opposing view came—by a 165-122 vote—from the section on health and medical care, which was supposed to deal only with means of improving health and medical care.

Kean solved the conflict by directing the chairman of the health and medical care section, Dr. Leonard W. Larson, president of the American Medical Association, to have his group withdraw its formal opposition to social security health insurance.

Astronauts Ready But U.S. Equipment Not

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (AP)—Are America's astronauts physically and psychologically ready to go? Said one Wednesday: "We can give you a one-word answer—yes."

But his superior quickly pointed out that while the seven spacemen may be ready to go into orbit, America's equipment still isn't ready to send them there.

Hopes were expressed, however, that the United States may orbit its first spaceman before the end of 1961.

At a news conference, Dr. Robert R. Gilruth, director of the Project Mercury man - in - space program, reported that space technicians are working on a program to strengthen the Atlas booster rocket. The rocket has had two vital failures. And present plans call for the United States to use the Atlas in launching the first astronaut.

Lt. Col. John E. Glenn Jr., of the Marines, was the astronaut who said he was ready right now to fly into space. Glenn said he spoke for the other six, too.

Bike Rider Beats Cars, Thousands Across New Span

NEW YORK (AP)—Thousands waited afoot and in cars Wednesday for the ribbon-cutting ceremony opening the $92 - million Throgs Neck Bridge connecting Long Island and the Bronx.

Was it a car? A motorcycle?

The speck grew and soon all could see.

It was a boy on a bike—the first vehicle across, even if it did beat the gun.

Belgian Strike Peace Conference Collapses

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A hastily convened peace conference of rival political parties to end Belgium's 23-day-old strike broke up in disagreement Wednesday night minutes after it started.

Leftist Socialist trade union leader Andre Renard, speaking to a rally of 15,000 strikers in Mons, immediately threatened a "new, more violent phase" of the strike aimed at overthrowing the government.

The failure of the peace conference to work out a suitable basis for a compromise threatened any conciliation attempts to end the Socialist walkout now costing Belgium $10 million a day.

FDR Jr. Pays Twice

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP)—School district officials said Wednesday they are returning to Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. a $1,232 check he sent to pay the school tax on his 300-acre Dutchess County farm.

Records showed he had paid the tax earlier.

Russ Shake Up Farm Ministry

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union Wednesday announced a top-to-bottom reorganization of the Agricultural Ministry in an apparent effort to solve food production problems.

The minister's new function, the Central Committee was told, is to coordinate scientific developments with farm management to increase output. The ministry has been largely administrative.

The reorganization follows a Soviet agricultural emergency that developed with two successive years of bad weather and poor farm management.

It was announced by Dimitri Polyansky, a rising young member of the Communist party Presidium who also is chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Russian Federation. The Russian Federation is the sprawling republic that extends from Leningrad on the west to Vladivostok on the east.

He said a special group will coordinate the operation of farm machinery and se to it equipment is kept in good repair.

De Gaulle Says People Back "Peace, Reason"

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle said Wednesday the French people had backed the policy of "peace and reason" for dealing with the Algerian problem.

The decision in Sunday's vote—providing for local autonomy and later political self-determination in Algeria—would, he promised, be applied "without reserve in the spirit as in the letter."

Baltimore Gerontology Research Center Urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two leaders of Maryland's delegation to the White House Conference on the Aging put in a plug for Baltimore Wednesday as the site for a proposed research center.

Sections of the conference discussing medical and biological aspects of aging research overwhelmingly approved a resolution asking that a federal center for gerontology studies be established. No site was mentioned.

That's when Mrs. Margaret C. Schweinhaut, chairman of Maryland's Commission on the Aging, and Dr. Matthew L. Tayback, vice chairman, urged that the center be located in Baltimore by expanding a present gerontology branch of City Hospitals.

The gerontology branch at the Baltimore hospital is now supported by the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md. Established 20 years ago, it has a staff of 68, including 30 research members trained in zoology, biochemistry, physiology, Biophysics, medicine, nutrition and psychology.

"City Hospitals is the only logical place to establish such a center unless we are to duplicate present facilities," said Dr. Tayback, assistant commissioner of the Baltimore City Health Department.

Mrs. Schweinhaut is a Democratic member of Maryland's House of Delegates from Montgomery County.

Yemen's Ruler Bomb Target

LONDON (AP)—Intrigue swirls around King Ahmed in his lonely capital in Yemen and he has been the target of several bombing attacks, Allied diplomats said Wednesday night.

Alternately blamed are Yemeni refugees from his iron, medieval rule, or agents of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, who covets Yemen as well as the rest of the Arabian Peninsula.

The 68-year-old king thereupon ordered the arrest of several Yemeni officials, including the chief of police, saying they had fallen down on their jobs.

A group of Yemenis who had been campaigning for political and social reform then fled to Aden, the neighboring British colony. Several asked for and got political asylum.

But resistance to Ahmed's steely rule did not subside. Since August about a dozen bomb explosions have been reported.

Reapportionment Plan By Population Pushed

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Backers of a plan to reapportion strength in the Maryland Legislature strictly on the basis of population began signing up co-sponsors Wednesday.

The proposal, most drastic of many reapportionment plans floating about the legislative corridors, was fathered by the Maryland Committee on Fair Representation.

Royce Hanson, American University faculty member, and Orphans Court Judge Bess Levine, Prince Georges County chairman of the committee, headed an advance party seeking sponsors of the bill in the legislature.

Within a short time they had promises of sponsorship from all members of the Prince Georges, Montgomery and Baltimore County delegations, many members of the 36-member Baltimore City delegation, and Del. John Hanson Mitchell, D-Charles.

The committee has led the fight to give more populous areas a stronger hand in state governmental affairs, which are now controlled by rural lawmakers.

Its proposal would increase membership in the House from 123 to 150 and in the Senate from 29 to 50 and would allot seats on the basis of the latest population count. Necessary revisions would follow each census.

Gov. Tawes endorsed another reapportionment plan in the 1960 legislature, but it failed. Proposed by a commission under Cumberland lawyer William C. Walsh, it called for immediate enlargement of the six-member delegations from the four metropolitan area counties — Prince Georges, Montgomery, Baltimore and Anne Arundel — with additional seats later for growing but still predominantly rural counties.

Tawes has indicated the Walsh plan may come up for a second try this year, but in the meantime he is closely watching the progress of a similar proposal already introduced by Sens. James A. Pine, D-Balto County, and Edward S. Northrop, D-Montgomery.

This calls for the immediate addition of four seats to Baltimore County; three each to Prince Georges and Montgomery; two each for Anne Arundel County and Baltimore's 3rd and 5th legislative districts, and one each for St. Marys, Charles, Howard and Harford counties.

10 Arrested In Marihuana Case Indicted

BALTIMORE (AP) — Federal grand jury indictments were returned Wednesday against 10 Negroes arrested last September when agents seized 500 pounds of marihuana on the Eastern Shore.

The indictments charged the drug, valued at $50,000, was grown on a Somerset County farm and some of it taken to New York for sale after harvesting.

An agent of the State Alcohol Tax Enforcement Unit touched off the arrests when he discovered some of the marihuana in bags in a panel truck near Salisbury Sept. 28.

Eight persons were named in a six - count indictment charging conspiracy to violate the federal marihuana law, unlawfully acquiring and transporting the drug, and aiding and abetting. Those named were:

The indictments said the drug was grown on a farm operated by John Woolford.

Circuit Court Rules Potomac Compact Valid

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Potomac River Compact of 1958 between Maryland and Virginia was upheld Wednesday in Baltimore Circuit Court.

Judge Anselm Sodaro ruled the compact for governing fisheries on the Potomac River to be valid and constitutional, saying it was legally adopted by Maryland voters in the November general election.

Judge Sodaro made the ruling in dismissing a suit in which 101 Southern Maryland watermen attacked the compact. Hyman A. Pressman of Baltimore was attorney for the watermen.

Pressman had contended compact provisions were not properly advertised in newspapers prior to the statewide referendum held in November. He also contended the compact was unconstitutional because it gave away Maryland's rights in the Maryland-owned river.

Judge Sodaro filed with his 37-page opinion a detailed synopsis of articles which appeared in county newspapers throughout the state, to show the extent of county publicity concerning the compact and the referendum

Pressman's main attack was based on a law calling for the advertisement of such matters in Baltimore newspapers and at least two county papers. He claimed this requirement had not been complied with in the case of the compact.

Rees Trial Prosecutors Visit Death Scene Today

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two government attorneys who will be prosecutors at the Melvin Davis Rees Jr. murder trial will go to Virginia Thursday to see the place where two persons' bodies were found.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Robert E. Cahill said he and another assistant, H. Russell Smouse, would make the one-day trip with several FBI agents.

Rees, 31-year-old jazz musician from Hyattsville, Md., will be tried in U. S. District Court here Jan. 25 on federal charges of kidnaping and slaying Mrs. Mildred Jackson, 27, and her 5-year-old daughter, Susan. Their bodies were found near Gambrills, Md.

Rees is charged in Virginia with the kidnap-slaying of Mrs. Jackson's husband, Carroll, 29, and another daughter, Janet, 1½, whose bodies were found in Virginia.

Cahill, Smouse and the FBI agents first will meet with Dr. G. T. Mann, Virginia's chief medical examiner, in Richmond. Then they will inspec. the Louisa County site where the family of four was abducted Jan. 11, 1959, and the abandoned sawmill site near Fredericksburg where Jackson and the younger daughter were found dead.

"I feel we have to do it," said Cahill. "There's no use talking about someplace you've never seen."

Cahill said the prosecution has submitted a list of 80 persons who may be called as witnesses to defense attorneys. He and Smouse agree the trial may last two weeks.

Defense attorneys are William J. Evans, former assistant U. S. attorney, and William J. O'Donnell, a former state's attorney for Baltimore City. Both were appointed by the court last July to represent Rees without fee.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Diets Can Be Low-Fat, Never No-Fat

No matter how much you may want to give up being fat, you can't give up fats entirely. A minimum of one to three tablespoons a day is absolutely essential for lubrication and for regulation of the chemical balance within your system.

What's more, without enough Vitamin E, which is provided richly by unrefined vegetable oils as well as whole grains and wheat germ, the body cannot make use of Vitamin A, the "skin beauty" vitamin. So it is possible to be deficient in A, even while you consume quantities of green and yellow vegetables.

The result? Dry lifeless hair and a dry skin that infects easily, erupting in pimples and blackheads. This is a paradox, a real puzzler for dieters who expect their skin and hair to improve after a cut in high-calorie intake. They are right, they should expect improvement . . .but only by substituting or cutting down, never by cutting out the body's vital needs.

Are there women who put their skin and hair on a starvation diet without realizing it? There are more of them now than ever before. They've read a great deal lately about cholesterol in the blood, about the role fats may play in the breeding of heart disease. Many of them have become enlightened . . . but just as many have become confused.

They are usually the same women who diagnose their own diseases and decide on their own diets (usually freak diets of their own design) without consulting their doctors. Half out of fear, half from the misconception that they are doing themselves a favor, they figure that, if fats both contain calories and increase cholesterol, No fats are better than some.

Where are the two chief fallacies in their figuring? First, while all fats contain about the same amount of calories—250 per ounce, it is only the "saturated" animal fats (butter, cream, lard, fatty meats) and the "hydrogenated" or hardened vegetable and synthetic fats (shortening and oleomargarine) that appear to boost cholesterol level. The "unsaturated" fats—corn, cottonseed and soybean oils (with their wealth of Vitamin E)—are not only safe but even appear to reduce cholesterol content in the blood. They are ideal for replacing animal fats in strictly-controlled diets.

Second, not every person is considered a susceptible candidate for a heart attack. Risk heightens for the overweight, of course, as it does for anyone with a family history of heart disease or with high blood pressure, diabetes or kidney disease. Combine any two of these conditions in one person and the risk rises immediately.

Who, then, should be the judge, to classify a woman and her diet? So many factors can modify such a judgment: emotional temperament, occupation, sedentary habits, climate and environment—all must be weighed side by side with physical condition and history.

It's foolhardy for the layman alone to classify himself. For the doctor, it's impossible without the help, the honesty, the cooperation of his patient. Both must work together, to work out a diet program for maximum nutrition at minimum risk. Both fear and freak diets carry far more danger for a heavyweight than an extra dollop of butter on her toast.

So, my advice to you, if you intend to lose more than ten pounds, is to go straight to your doctor... and get the story, your story, straight. If you are up to par, with no pathological restrictions, he should approve heartily of the diet plan in my booklet, "Your Beauty Diet." For your copy, just mail ten cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope to me, JRP, c/o this newspaper . . . and allow two weeks for delivery.

High Speed 'Piggyback' Roller Roads Proposed

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — "Piggyback" roller roads to replace commuter railways and turnpikes as the newest concept of high-speed travel were proposed this week by two Westinghouse Electric Corp. engineers.

Charles Kerr, Pittsburgh, and Clarence Lynn of Westinghouse's Buffalo Division, said their road, if ever built, could carry passengers, commuters' automobiles and freight containers at speeds of up to 150 miles an hour.

A series of self-powered rubber rollers about 20 feet apart in separate lanes would make up a roadbed, according to their scheme. Flat - bottomed piggyback carriers would glide over these rollers at high speed with up to 10 cars, loaded with passengers, commuters' autos or freight.

There would be no power in the vehicles. The power would come from individual motors in the rollers controlled by programmed computers.

Commuters would just drive onto the dollies at each station and the car and dolly then would be loaded automatically on the train, as would freight.

Kerr and Lynn's plan showed that the dimensions of each piggyback carrier would allow accommodations for 10 commuters' cars and a cabin where riders could relax.

The two engineers said the motors in the road rollers would be idle except when a train is passing over them, therefore comparatively small motors could be employed. A train would pass over each roller in about five five seconds.

Every roller in the road would contain a braking device and control would be completely automatic.

The main obstacle, according to Kerr and Lynn, is the building costs. However, they said the road could handle both freight and passenger traffic automatically at twice the speed of any transportation system yet proposed.

Objects at the North or South Pole weigh about one-half of 1 per cent more than at the Equator, owing to the lesser gravitational pull in the latter region.

Blizzard Hits Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A blizzard swept the mountainous regions of Syria Tuesday, bringing air and other communications to a standstill. A 30-inch blanket of snow was reported.

Shoveling 15 inches of snow from a sidewalk 50 feet long and five feet wide requires as much energy as lifting 1,950 pounds.

NEW YORK (AP)—Has a new bull market uptrend started?

But he expresses the belief the first upward move will probably top off sometime this month or early next month.

Ward says this should be followed by a testing and declining period during February and March.

He adds that although this would provide a more solid base structure for a still higher market later in the year, the action will continue to be very selective the balance of 1961.

"Many of the temporarily oversold issues of 1960 will be the market leaders of 1961," he declares.

"Leaders such as U. S. Steel, Standard Oil of California, International Paper and Anaconda are in the Dow Jones industrial average and, as a result, these industrials may not reach a new low during the period ahead as so many have been expecting.

"Is this a good time for new purchases? Yes, provided you choose stocks that have not already been temporarily over-exploited as to price."

The market as a whole, which has been in a narrow trading range for eight or nine weeks, shows signs of breaking out on the upside, in the opinion of L. O. Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co.

He cites these reasons:

1. The cyclical stocks are cheaper and more liquidated than the glamor issues and the consumption industry shares.

2. The chances are that business will begin to get better sometime in the next 60 to 90 days and it is time to discount this.

3. Many people think the new administration will boldly do things to stimulate recovery soon after it takes office.

Labor Council Backs School Building Plan

The Western Maryland Central Labor Council Tuesday endorsed the proposed school building program of the Allegany County Board of Education.

A motion to support the program was adopted by the delegates of the 22 AFL-CIO affiliated unions. The labor group represents thousands of area union workers.

The labor organization has discussed the school building program at several recent meetings and officials said they felt the county needs such action to provide suitable facilities for the education of the youth of the county. Education is vital for the progress of the county and is one of the factors involved in attracting new industry, according to the labor leaders.

The program as advocated by the Board of Education calls for the construction of two junior high schools in Cumberland. The new schools would be for seventh and eighth grade students with high school pupils attending Allegany and Fort Hill.

The education group also proposes the erection of a six-room addition to Parkside School, a new elementary school in Frostburg, conversion of Beall Elementary to a junior high, building of three shops and other changes at Beall High, a six-room addition at Gephart School and the conversion of Carver School to a community college.

In earlier actions the program was endorsed by Local 244, International Typographical Union, and the Woman's Civic Club.

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners last month authorized the preparation of an enabling bill to be submitted to the General Assembly providing for the financing of the program. However, the commissioners have not endorsed the program and no amount of money was mentioned when the commissioners ordered the bill prepared.

Meeting Set On City Programs

City officials will be presented a detailed explanation of the municipal classification and pay scale programs at a meeting today at 7:30 p. m. in the office of Mayor J. Edwin Keech.

The explanation will be made by Milton B. Millon, director of the Municipal Technical Advisory Service of the University of Maryland, who prepared the programs that have been adopted by the city.

Attending the meeting will be members of the City Council and Civil Service Board, according to Mayor Keech, who said the meeting was arranged at the suggestion of department heads, who feel that there are some inequities in the programs.

Sentence Withheld In Armed Robbery

Associate Judge W. Earle Cobey today ordered Jerome Wesley Whitaker, 42, of Cresaptown, remanded to the county jail pending a report by James Lewis, state parole officer on the man's background.

Whitaker had entered a guilty plea to armed robbery January 3 of Warnick's Market on Bedford Road when his case was brought before Judge Cobey on criminal information provided by State's Attorney James S. Getty.

Edward J. Ryan was Whitaker's attorney and he asked the court for leniency and pointed out that it was the man's first offense.

A second man, Ernest Bennett, 36, of Centreville, was released yesterday in connection with the case. It was brought out during the hearing that Bennett had been with Whitaker but had been intoxicated and did not leave the car outside the market while the robbery took place.

Bennett was unaware of the robbery and saw only that Whitaker came out of the market with some groceries. He was unaware of the theft of $215 in cash during the robbery, according to testimony today. Bennett had been held as a material witness in the case.

Both men were reportedly together most of the day. Bennett gave himself up to State Police at Bedford. Whitaker was arrested after his car became stalled in a snow bank along a back road at Lake Koon.

Fire Routs Students

LEONARTOWN, Md. (AP) — A fire in an industrial arts classroom Tuesday routed several hundred students from the Bannaker Public School in nearby Loveville.

There were no injuries reported and firemen quickly extingjished the fire in the St. Mary's County school attended by more than 600 first through twelfth grade students. The entire student body had not reported at the time of the fire.

Escapees Returned To Martinsburg

Three escapees, including a man being held on a murder charge, were recaptured Tuesday night and returned to the Berkeley County Jail in Martinsburg.

Martinsburg authorities said yesterday that the men were recaptured about 10 p. m. within the town limits of Martinsburg.

The three fled on foot from the jail and all law enforcement agencies in the community were notified and road blocks were set up on the town's limits.

Deputy Sheriff LeDane said he was overpowered by the trio as he was returning another prisoner, Bernard Barrett, to the cell block. Barrett refused to join in the escape.

Authorities said Norris is being held on a murder charge for the next session of the grand jury in Berkeley County. He allegedly stabbed another Negro man in a Martinsburg tavern on New Year's Eve.

Both Weatherholtz and Grove were being held in the jail as parole violators.

Tax Exemption Study Group Holds Meeting

The advisory committee named last month by the Allegany County Board of Commissioners to study the county 10-year tax exemption law met for the first time this week for a preliminary discussion of the program.

Leslie J. Clark, attorney to the county commissioners, outlined provisions of the 10-year tax exemption for new industry and the section which provides for an exemption for expansion of established industries.

John Stitely, supervisor of assessments for the county, said the county is exempting $14,200,000 of assessed property under provisions of the law. In a few years some of this assessed valuation will be placed on the tax books due to expiration of the 10-year exemption period. The largest amount, $12,000,000 will go back on the tax books in 1967.

The group discussed various phases of the tax exemption law and Clark said the county commissioners are mainly concerned with some recommendations of the expansion section of the tax exemption. The commissioners would like some clarification of this provision so they can have some clear yardstick to determine the eligibility of firms seeking exemptions due to expansion of their plants.

Others attending the meeting were Miller Bowen, Frostburg; F. Patrick Allender, Chester A. Fisher and Eugene P. Brown.

Three Youths Given Sentences

A Cumberland youth was sentenced to 30 days in the Allegany County Jail and two minors were ordered committed to the Maryland Training School for Boys during a hearing in Juvenile Court.

Magistrate Paul Barnett, who presided, ordered Joseph Glenn Lewis, 19, of 512 Marshall Street, committed to the County Jail for 30 days after finding him guilty of contributing to the delinquency of the two minors.

The minors were then sentenced to the training school.

The three were arrested early yesterday by City Officer Oliver Cook in connection with a stolen automobile case.

Court attaches noted that the one minor has had four offenses within the past three months, while the second juvenile was in court for the second time within three months.

December Police Report Made

There were 858 arrests made during December by the City Police Department, according to a report presented by Police and Fire Commissioner Philmore F. Fleming to the Mayor and Council.

The report also stated that there were $1,741.10 collected in fines last month.

The Fire Department answered 44 calls during December, with the report stating that only minor damage resulted from the fires.

Wild rice, long a favorite of gourmets, is not rice at all. It is actually a perennial grass indigenous to North America. Most of the annual crop is still hand-harvested by Indians in the lake-regions of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a swell dancer and he sure does know it. Whenever we are out on a party or with a crowd he asks me to dance and the minute he spots a better dancer on the floor he grabs her and throws me at her partner.

This has happened so many times it's beginning to irritate me beyond endurance. I've told him it's not only insulting to me but there is always the possibility that the girl he grabs may prefer the guy she's dancing with. He says I'm overly touchy and that no girl has ever complained.

I told him I was writing to you and he said you'll surely see the humor in the situation and tell me I'm wrong. Am I?

—NO EXPERT

DEAR NO: This is about as funny as a four-alarm fire in a home for the aged. Your husband's behavior is unspeakably rude and he must have a colossal ego to assume that EVERY woman he encounters would rather dance with him than anyone else.

Tell him if he pulls that stunt again you will walk off the floor and leave him to battle it out with the man whose partner he tried to snatch.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a fellow 19 and in love with a girl who is afraid of all men. Her father beats her and uses bad language. He also hits his wife and slaps the other kids.

I want to marry this girl and take her out of that terrible home but she says she doesn't trust me and that I will probably treat her like her father treats her mother.

I've always been kind to this girl and I've never hit a woman in my life. What can I do to get her to marry me? She is of legal age and could leave whenever she wants to.—IN LOVE.

Dear In Love: This girl's home situation has twisted her thinking and I don't think you can easily untwist it.

The normal reaction of a normal girl would be to leave a punishing situation at the earliest possible minute. Since she chooses to stay at home and get belted around I don't think you should try to talk her into marriage. Find a new girl.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is there anything wrong with an 18-year-old boy phoning a girl, 16, at four o'clock in the morning?

Our daughter has been going steady with Rick and they see each other every day, even if only for a minute. Rick works nights and our daughter is in high school.

We have a phone with a long cord in the upstairs hall. Our daughter often takes the phone into her room and closes the door. Then if she gets a call no one else in the house is disturbed.

This morning she was giggling about the fact that Rick had phoned her at 4 a.m. just for kicks. I thought it was rather cute but her father blew his top. Is there anything wrong with this?—NOT SURE.

DEAR NOT: There's a time and place for everything. Four o'clock in the morning is not the time for a social call. It may not be "wrong" but it adds up to pretty poor judgment.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Resurfacing Projects Set If City Funds Available

Depending on the availability of money for the projects, the Street Department plans to have 15 street resurfacing jobs ready to go this year and has already begun action on ordinances.

The list of 15 streets is a priority group prepared by the Engineering Department, according to Street Commissioner John J. Long. No one street has been set up at the present time as being top on the list.

Notices of hearings on three ordinances January 23 were approved yesterday by the Mayor and Council. They are Washington Street from Kiefer Avenue to Fayette Street; Allegany Street from Fayette to Cumberland Street; and East Elder Street from Virginia Avenue to the C&O Canal.

In submitting a few ordinances to council each week for hearings, Long said yesterday he was getting ready for starting resurfacing in the spring depending on whether money is available.

Two of the 15, City Hall Square brick section and the Central YMCA intersection were submitted to bids last year but council delayed action. Others listed for possible action in 1961 are:

During 1960, the Street Department resurfaced 15 streets at a contract price of $125,400.

In addition, and as last year, there are plans for light-surface treatment of some streets, alley paving and the paving of new streets during the year ahead.

4-H Youths To Attend Meet

Five members of the Allegany County 4-H Older Youth Club will attend a state conference today at Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, according to Mrs. Edith Belcher, assistant county home demonstration agent.

They are Sally and Lois Miller, Midland; Shirley Wiegand, Janice White, Valley Road; and Edward Ott, Ridgeley. The delegates to the conference will attend a session during the morning at which various phases of 4-H work will be outlined and in the afternoon a tour of industries and businesses in Baltimore.

Two Injured In Car Crash

Two Frostburg women were hospitalized yesterday following a one-car accident in Midland.

Admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital were Mrs. E. C. Bauman and her sister, Miss Veronica Sleeman who reside at 115 Mt. Pleasant Street, Frostburg. Mrs. Bauman sustained lacerations of her face and lip, while Miss Sleeman suffered a possible head injury. Both were reported as "good" yesterday.

The accident occurred as Rev. John Sleeman, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Midland, and a brother of the injured women, was traveling northbound on the highway, lost control and struck a utility pole. Father Sleeman was not injured.

Judge Cobey Visits Brother

Associate Judge W. Earle Cobey of Allegany County Circuit Court left yesterday for Washington where he will meet his brother, State Senator James A. Cobey of Merced, Calif.

Senator Cobey is attending the White House Conference on Problems of the Aging as a member of the California delegation.

Tax Collector Makes Report

A breakdown of the report reveals general collections totaled $88,134.89; water fees, $47,685.05; paving liens, $3,119.98, and sewer liens, $110.

Mrs. Lucile Roeder, city finance commissioner, also presented a report to the Mayor and Council that listed a balance of $137,659.39 in the general account as of the end of the year.

Other balances as of January 1 included $98,304.88, water operative account; $46,824.90, general improvement bond account; $34.72, paving bonds; $631.49, flood account, and $2,297.63, 1931 sewer bonds.

Getty Attends State Meeting

James S. Getty, state's attorney for Allegany County, attended a conference Saturday in Rockville being held by the State's Attorney's Association of Maryland.

The purpose of the conference was to review and recommend changes to the proposed Maryland Code to members of the General Assembly.

Getty discussed non-support, sentencing, restitution and probation, search warrants and the revision of the department of correction.

Regimentation Vs. Incentives

Chinese Communists have been having trouble with agriculture. It is not surprising that their incredible boasts of what they were going to accomplish in increased output in 1960 were unfulfilled. But they are forced to admit that serious disaster has struck their farm program.

For public consumption they blame the worst series of natural calamities in a century—drought, floods, typhoons, hail, frost, locusts and plant diseases—which virtually took 64 million acres of arable land out of production and seriously reduced the output on 84 million additional acres.

Russia has been having similar troubles. Here the failure is blamed on Vlademir Matskevich, who was in charge of the program, and he will be demoted to a minor post to reflect on where he went wrong in applying the infallible dogmas of Marx.

Both China and Russia have tried to step up agricultural production by regimenting peasants instead of by giving them incentives to produce more. In China, as in Russia, officials are punished for failure of policies they had no choice but to follow.

Though America's farm program is excessively costly because of the huge surpluses it produces, the incentive system it uses has at least accomplished something which Communist regimentation hasn't: It has brought high production. During World War II Americans didn't find it necessary to worry about getting enough to eat. Like the Sorcerer's Apprentice, Washington cannot find a magic word to stop the flow.

Too much is better than too little. Incentives are better than regimentation. Communism hasn't solved the problem of agriculture. Most of the nations of the world would be happy if their only problem in agriculture were overproduction.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Republican Organization

When Senator Jacob Javits attempted to lessen the influence of Senator Barry Goldwater in the process of reorganizing the Republican Party after the campaign, Goldwater came out on top because the Republican Party is conservative. Goldwater's position is not dubious; he makes himself clear on all public questions. Like most conservatives, he is pugnacious.

In an address to the Republican National Committee, Goldwater spoke not so much of the Republican defeat, but of the astonishing victories in this campaign. As one looks at these victories, which gained the Republicans two seats in the Senate and 21 seats in the House, Senator Goldwater listed these facts:

"Topping the list is the charming lady from Maine, Margaret Chase Smith, whose constituents returned her to office by a whopping 61.6 per cent. Next is the stalwart Senator from New Hampshire, Styles Bridges, who received 60.3 per cent. Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky took third place honors with 59.2 per cent, narrowly topping the performance of Nebraska's Carl Curtis who won with 58.5 per cent of the votes cast.

"Next in line come three men who did equally well, with 56.3 per cent records. They were Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Senator Clifford Case of New Jersey, and the late Keith Thomson of Wyoming, whose tragic, untimely death shortly after the election constitutes the one sad note in this report."

Unfortunately, these figures do not provide a pattern for the Republican Party. Whereas Styles Bridges and Karl Mundt might be called conservatives, Margaret Chase Smith and Clifford Case might be regarded as liberals, and Senators Cooper and Saltonstall as middle-of-the-roaders.

Thus, out of these statistics one cannot reach a conclusion, certainly not the conclusion that the Republican Party is prepared to follow the conservatism of Senator Barry Goldwater. On the other hand, the fact that the Senate Republican conference elected Senator Goldwater Chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee, which makes him one of the three top leaders of his party, the other two being Richard Nixon and Thruston Morton—this fact is not to be ignored.

Goldwater did not ignore it. He said:

". . . I do believe that there is danger in constant shifting of party position. I believe we should be consistent; that we should take a position and stand on it, fighting for what we believe and know to be the right and best course for the American people."

The Eisenhower Administration was really without party conception. During its first term, President Eisenhower deliberately sought to put himself above party—to be a head of state rather than a chief executive. He organized the White House on that basis with Sherman Adams as major domo. It did not work because it was alien to the American concept of the Presidency. Our President is a political party leader who is expected to help build his party in Congress, so that he gets proper support and not to have to depend on the opposition party as Eisenhower depended upon Lyndon Johnson.

President Kennedy, while he is appointing some Republicans and some no-party men to office, is a Democrat and will operate as a Democrat. Although the Democrats are in power, they have weak spots, particularly in the South and in New York State. In New York, the Democrats are dependent upon the Liberal Party. It was a close call because the Liberal Party is as likely as not to throw its strength to either party, being bound to neither.

Professional Democrats in New York are, on the whole, antagonistic to the Liberal Party and to the Reformers, led by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. The stronger leadership of the party in New York City, led by Representative Charles Buckley, will have nothing to do with them. Carmine DeSapio is not in as strong a position to resist them, but he is antagonistic to them. Unless this Democratic cleavage is healed before 1962, the Republicans feel that they have a chance in this metropolitan area. But the leadership of Governor Nelson Rockefeller is insufficient to hold the Republicans together.

This much is clear about the Republican Party in the year of an unexpected defeat. All the professionals admit that the Presidential campaign was badly managed; that the Party actually in some places shows real vigor. But there seems to be common agreement that competition with Kennedy as to who is most liberal will do no good.

U.S. Allies Flabbergasted By Ike's Eleventh-Hour Vigorous Action

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — American allies have been flabbergasted, to put it mildly, at the spectacle of outgoing President Eisenhower starting policies in Laos and Cuba during the last few days in office which he could not possibly follow up.

In Laos, Ike appeared willing to take the United States up to the brink of a jungle war thousands of miles away, which no American military leader wanted to fight, and which the President who succeeds him certainly would hesitate to continue.

In Cuba, the retiring President broke relations with a country whose people have been our friends for over 60 years, yet continued relations with the same Communist countries which were supplying arms to Cuba. He did this despite the quite recent advice of his Secretary of State that the U. S. Embassy in Havana must, at all costs, be kept open.

This sudden activity by a President who spent more than three years out of his eight in office either ill or on vacation has not only mystified our allies, but has made them wonder whether Eisenhower was deliberately trying to make things difficult for Kennedy. Was he trying to hand Kennedy Eisenhower-made policies which Kennedy would have to carry out? This was asked quite seriously among the diplomats of Western Europe.

Behind Ike's Moves

The answer is threefold:

1. Ike was burned up at Kennedy's campaign insinuations that he was a do-nothing President and had let the USA deteriorate to the rank of second-class power. To show the opposite, Ike has been determined to leave office a strong, hard-hitting President.

2. Allen Dulles had warned the President last fall that the Communist bloc might take advantage of the vacuum between the election November 8 and the Inauguration January 20 to try to catch the United States off balance. So he, Ike, has been determined to demonstrate that he's firmly in the saddle, has a tight grip on the reins.

3. Adm. Harry Felt, U.S. commander in the Pacific, sent the White House an alarming report claiming that the Communists had invaded Laos and that it could turn into another Korea. This got Ike all steamed up, caused him to alert the 7th Fleet.

In the end, Admiral Felt's alarm appeared unjustified. Only two Communist soldiers—no troops—were found in Laos. There was a Russian arms drop, but it was insignificant compared with our own. So our British and French allies flatly refused to go along with any scare moves in Southeast Asia until Kennedy took office.

In Latin America, some governments had been veering toward a break with Fidel Castro, but Ike's sudden rupture now makes that difficult. For it's extremely unpopular for any Latin Nation to appear to be following the advice and leadership of military-minded Uncle Sam.

And when Ike sent the giant airplane carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt to Guantanamo he made it all the more difficult for even our best friends to follow our lead in breaking relations. There is nothing that boils the Latins more than the spectre of U.S. might hovering over a little Latin nation.

Note—Our Allies now figure they have the President of the United States in a calmer mood. But they're still mystified as to why after so many quiet years of putting on safe greens, Ike suddenly began swinging wild into the dangerous rough of foreign affairs.

Words, Not Deeds

One proposal for getting rid of farm surpluses, pounded for years by the National Farmers Union, has been "food for peace." So it was natural that when the Inaugural Committee conceived the idea of a float featuring "food and Peace" they should turn to Minesota, breadbasket of the West, and Bill Thatcher, head of the Farmers Union grain terminal in the twin cities.

Mr. Thatcher collects around $3,500,000 yearly from Uncle Sam and the American taxpayers for storing surplus grain. Out of this, Thatcher spends about $2,000,000 a year for propaganda for higher price supports which have the effect of increasing farm production and, in turn, the farm surplus which he stores. Among other things he signed up two years ago for a 3-year TV "educational" program on a 14-station network.

So the Inaugural Committee suggested that Mr. Thatcher might spare a mere $2,000 to build a "food for peace" float which would illustrate one way of getting rid of the food surplus which Mr. Thatcher helps to store. They thought this would also be educational.

Mr. Thatcher, however, said no.

NOTE—The American eagle, standing on a globe representing the world, and holding a giant market basket in its beak, with farmers filling the basket, will still be in the parade, however. The John Deere Farm Implement Company generously offered to pay for the Food For Peace float.

Merry-Go-Round

One of Kennedy's few public relations boo-boos: When he was quoted as not liking to be called "Jack." . . . Lincoln was called "Abe," the first Roosevelt was called "Teddy," Churchill is called "Winnie," de Gaulle is called "Le Grand Charlie," Field Marshal Joffre was called "Papa," Adenauer is called "Der Alte," and Eisenhower is called "Ike." It's a first principle of politics that as long as folks call you by a familiar name, you're OK. Suppose the American people start calling Jack "Mr. K" of the USA . . . Congressman John Dingell, the Detroit Democrat and a crusading conservationist, is urging the reappointment of Ross Leffler, Ike's Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Fish and Wildlife. Leffler has done a fine job.

Will Bob Kennedy Be Good Attorney General?

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON—Of all the Cabinet appointments, the one that the Senate will soon debate and examine most carefully before giving its "advice and consent" will be that of Robert F. Kennedy, the nominee for Attorney General.

Aged 35 and with no record in courtroom practice of law, the younger Kennedy receives the appointment partly as a political reward and partly as the trusted lieutenant of his brother, the President-elect.

What kind of Attorney General will he turn out to be? For one thing, he will make a much better record if he gives up politics than if he continues to participate in political activity.

The Department of Justice is basically a non-political department of the government. Though occasionally there have been criticisms alleging political bias when certain prosecutions were carried on, the department during most administrations has managed to steer clear of politics.

Does the public realize what an attorney general has to do and how important it is for the American people, especially the legal profession, to have confidence in the Department of Justice? Here are several points to be borne in mind.

1. As top man in the enforcement of federal laws, the Attorney General is the chief legal adviser to the President and a member of his Cabinet, in which he ranks fourth.

2. The Attorney General furnishes advice and opinion on legal questions to the President and also to the other Cabinet officers when so requested.

3. The Attorney General construes the laws under which the executive departments act and furnishes legal counsel in all federal cases.

4. The Attorney General directs all suits before the Supreme Court of the United States in which the federal government is concerned. He may appear before the Supreme Court to argue a case of great importance, though this usually is left to the Solicitor General.

5. The Attorney General and his staff review all executive orders and draft legislation desired by the President.

6. The Attorney General appears before Congressional committees to testify on proposed legislation concerned with law enforcement and the judiciary.

7. The Attorney General selects for recommendation to the President the nominees for federal judgeships and also the 91 U. S. attorneys and 600 assistant attorneys throughout the country who are the chief prosecuting officers for the federal government in each judicial district. Congress is being asked by the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee to create 63 new federal judgeships.

8. The Attorney General is responsible for the enforcement of all federal laws involving crime, including those relating to kidnapping, bribery, counterfeiting, narcotics, extortion, perjury, and subversive activities and espionage.

9. The Attorney General enforces the antitrust laws, conducting both civil and criminal suits.

10. The Attorney General has complete control of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and may order or discontinue its investigations.

11. The Attorney General is responsible for enforcement of the internal revenue laws in all manner of tax cases.

12. The Attorney General directs all civil-rights cases involving the federal government, including, of course, all school desegregation orders of the courts.

13. The Attorney General must enforce the labor-racketeering laws, including cases that involve misuse of union funds or extortion of money from employers.

All in all, it's a formidable list. Mr. Kennedy could, to be sure, change the nature of the job of the Attorney General. He could make it more of a general managership of a big department and depend on assistants with more experience than he has had in the practice of law to do the legal work of the department.

Young Kennedy is a tireless worker and is reported to be a skillful administrator. He could make a creditable record as the head of the Department of Justice, despite his lack of experience as a trial lawyer. But will he be judged on the basis of his work in his own department, or will attention center on what he does in the field of politics in behalf of his brother's administration?

For there are countless things a Cabinet officer can do right along to advance the political fortunes of his chief, especially if the latter is likely to be up for re-election four years later. So far as the American people are concerned, it seems clear that they do not wish to see politics influencing the judgment of an Attorney General any more than they would care to see it affecting the decisions of the Secretary of State or the Secretary of Defense.

If Robert Kennedy abandons all political activities and concentrates on running the Department of Justice impartially, and if he efficiently administers this big department — which has about 31,000 employes—he will be regarded as a good Attorney General by the public. But it probably will always be hard to convince the members of the American Bar Association that a President need not appoint a top-notch lawyer to be the Attorney General of the United States.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

MANPOWER PROBLEM — Reports persist that President-elect John F. Kennedy is having trouble getting the men he wants for his administration, particularly at the second and third levels of the executive scale.

Kennedy's recruiters seem to be running into difficulties. One deals with the fact that most business executives are Republican and do not want to interrupt their careers to help a Democratic administration.

The other deals with government pay scales, which in the executive brackets are notoriously low in comparison to private industry. Many bright young men would want to come to work for the government, but, having no estate of their own built up, feel it would be an injustice to their families and themselves to stop their careers during their most productive years in order to work for the government.

A third factor has crept into the picture. This concerns "leaked" stories that President Eisenhower was unhappy about a Republican in his administration who accepted a cabinet post under Kennedy.

This attitude has caused more than one youthful administrator in industry to think twice about the attitude of his Republican boss before asking for a leave of absence to go into government work.

Kennedy's recruiters are working through a mountain of applications for the many administrative jobs they must fill, but they don't want political hangers-on, or some politician's friend. And that's what most of the applicants are.

Kennedy's Policy

By Leslie Gould

The $64 economic question today is the policy — singular or plural—the new Kennedy Administration will follow.

The reason there is this question is the conflict of the free spending and taxing program outlined in the Democratic platform with some of the conservative appointments Mr. Kennedy has made to his Cabinet.

As the date for the change at Washington approaches, some clues to this policy are appearing. These are in the reports to Mr. Kennedy by study groups named by him.

The first of these was the report of James M. Landis, calling for new leadership in the alphabetical agencies. This report was highly critical of the procedures in some of the agencies that are hampering business.

Now, a second report—this one economic — recommends a program to meet what is admitted as a business "recession" more widespread than a "rolling readjustment."

This report is made to Mr. Kennedy by an MIT professor of economics—Dr. Paul A. Samuelson. There is some flavor of the thinking of Harvard Professor J. Kenneth Galbraith, who back in 1955 was seeing 1929 as being repeated.

Dr. Samuelson, though, doesn't believe that the current recession can be termed a depression. He is rather pessimistic, which probably is "good politics" at this time—so that if a recovery develops later this year the new regime can take the bows.

According to Dr. Samuelson, "1959 and 1960 have been grievously disappointing years." But he skips over the fact that even the last year—when business slid off—the economy for the first time on record passed the half trillion mark.

Also skipped over is the fact that the United States up to 1960 had been enjoying its greatest boom in history—in spite of the pessimism of the "eggheads" like Prof. Galbraith in the early days of that boom.

That is water over the dam—as to who was right or wrong these last 10 years of boom. The important thing is to restore confidence and bring about a turn in the business tide.

This is the responsibility of the new administration and how it meets this will set the stage for business as well as prepare the ground for the next presidential election—only a short four years away.

Interestingly, Dr. Samuelson does not favor a return to exceptionally easy money — the major weapon against recessions prewar and in recent years. However, inflation does not particularly worry him.

He does favor some step up in spending, but with an eye on the international balance of payments position of the U. S.

Expansion of unemployment compensation benefits, with emergency legislation to permit all states to continue paying unemployment benefits—even at a stepped up rate—for at least 39 weeks, regardless of the condition of their insurance reserves.

Defense spending geared to needs rather than the immediate health of the economy.

Foreign aid should continue, based on the needs rather than the particular ability of the U. S. to pay at the moment.

Urban renewal and slum clearance should be pressed.

Mortgage rates be brought down to 4½ per cent to encourage housing, although the report is doubtful about a housing pick up this year.

Accelerate highway construction programs.

Only limited use now of Federal Reserve powers to increase the supply of money and ease credit, because of the international payments crisis.

Treasury should go slow in switching from short term debt into long term, also because of the international payments situation.

A temporary tax cut, of 3 or 4 percentage points in the tax rate applicable to every income class, effective in March or April on withholding and continued to the year end. The report asks that the executive be given the power to continue such reductions for one or two six months (or three months) periods beyond that time.

A new approach — not spelled out—to the wage-price spiral, but the implication is that Government should use its influence on holding down prices.

Basically, it is still a spend and spend program, restrained only by the critical international balance of payments situation.

They're 'Respiratory Infections,' Not 'Colds'

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Thirty years ago scientists were doing their best to find the organism responsible for the common cold. It turned out to be a virus. Since that time, dozens of distinct viruses have been isolated from men and women with upper respiratory infections.

It is obvious that we use the term—a cold—all too loosely. The reason why so many viruses were found is that there are so many different respiratory infections with symptoms resembling the common cold.

Most of us complain of having a cold or the flu whenever we develop nasal congestion, sore throat, aching, and unusual fatigue. Variations occur in that the sore throat may be associated with a tickle in the throat, hoarseness, or a deep productive cough.

Symptoms have little to do with the causative agent. They depend upon where the organisms settle and vary from the sniffles when the nose is involved to an old hound dog bark when the trachea is invaded.

All are "colds" to the laity but respiratory infection is a better term. Furthermore, the same virus may be responsible, explaining why one child in the family develops a respiratory infection that is nosy; another, throaty; a third, chesty.

Special laboratory studies would be needed to determine whether the virus that is pestering the neighborhood is influenza A or B, an adenovirus, ECHO virus, Coxsackie, or one of the lesser known varieties. After an epidemic gets going, the culprit usually is determined by the local health department, medical school, or laboratory. Some medico is curious enough to make the tests.

MEDICINE

D. R. writes: I have been taking an antihistaminic product for allergic rhinitis, which helps. Will using such medicine for a long time have a bad effect on the blood or the body?

REPLY

No. Many persons have taken these drugs for years without developing unpleasant or serious side effects. Those who develop reactions switch to another brand of antihistaminic or stop their use entirely.

FLU VACCINE

Mrs. A. G. writes: Is vaccination against Asiatic flu availbale?

REPLY

Yes. Most flu vaccines contain prophylaxis against the usual types A and B, along with protection against the Asian strain.

RINGWORM

L. W. writes: Can athlete's foot spread to the inside of the body through the blood stream?

REPLY

No, but other infections may develop in the cracks and crevices of the foot that can reach the blood stream. Occasionally the body becomes sensitized to the fungi on the feet and produces an "id" or allergic reaction on the hands.

MOONFACED

L. P. writes: What can be done for a large face due to taking cortisone?

REPLY

If you must have a steroid, switching to another type may help the situation. As a rule, puffiness of the tissues goes away when cortisone is stopped.

MYOPIA

Mrs. J. L. writes: Is nearsightedness due to low metabolism?

REPLY

No. It is hereditary. The individual is born with eyeballs which are too long.

MUMPS AND FERTILITY

F. A. K. writes: Can a man's fertility be tested after an attack of mumps?

REPLY

Yes, but there is no need unless complications occurred during the attack of mumps.

SKULL ENLARGEMENT

H. J. writes: Does Paget's disease of the bone cause the head to get bigger?

REPLY

Yes, in many instances. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this disease, also known as osteitis deformans.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Former President Harry Truman likes to tell of the day, a year or so after he left the White House, that he went calling on a friend in New York and inadvertently rang the wrong door bell. The man who answered accepted his apology graciously enough, then did a double take, and exclaimed, "Say, did anybody ever tell you that you're the spitting image of that old blankety blank Harry Truman?"

A Carthage, Tex., candidate for constable distributed campaign circulars listing his qualifications in this comparatively modest fashion: "Vote for Turk Chamness—the bank robber catchin'est constable in the U.S.A. and the fightin'est, pound for pound, wet or dry. (Present weight: 105 pounds)."

They had to fire a fine old lighthouse keeper the other day. He kept dousing the light to watch TV.

Laundries Biggest Service Industry

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — Professional laundries have become the nation's largest personal service industry, with an annual sales volume of more than $1.6 billion, the American Laundry Institute said.

The institute said the industry processed more than 5 billion pounds of laundry a week — including a weekly average of more than 50 million men's shirts.

In sprucing up the nation the industry yearly uses 150 million pounds of soap, 37 million pounds of starch and 950 million collar supports.

Woman To Woman

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — If hubby has a den, put something orange or tangerine in it.

It's sure to make him feel like an executive. Self-satisfied, that is. Color psychologist claim the orange and tangerine shades have such an effect.

Rose Padgett, of Purdue University's department of clothing and textiles, is the expert claiming that every executive - looking nook or suite "must" now have that magic touch of orange or tangerine.

Miss Padgett cited the "must" for executive suites in a report in the current issue of "College and University Business," a professional journal.

But more than the gift of the orange or tangerine's needed in the fashion - minded executive's pad—at home or in the office.

"Other colors are American beauty pink, rosy reds to coral, carnation pink, cerise and light or dark red," Miss Padgett said.

"A touch of white, black or charcoal seems pertinent. When these colors are combined they affect one another in powerful ways. In general, the bright colors predominate, giving a striking effect."

Furniture fabrics, for the home or office, lean toward opulence, Miss Padgett reported in her review of the latest color and texture trends in upholstery and slipcover materials.

She said the opulence is achieved through the use of distinctive colorful fabrics, newly textured in a variety of ways and yet appropriate for their selected needs.

"Gone are the days when the faithful four—brown, blue, black and white—dominated the scene," she said.

"The textured fabric look is much in vogue. Texture is achieved in a variety of ways to give the flat or the three-dimensional look.

Miss Padgett said the furniture fabrics fall into the following four patterns:

—Loomed fabrics with emphasis on woven design in the jacquard weave, the diamond pattern, the basic twill, satin and plain weaves.

—The luxury newcomer, wool suede, a 100 per cent non-woven wool fabric with a soft to the hand and rich luster. The wool is moth-proofed and treated with a silicone finish to repel moisture, oil and air-borne dirt.

—Dynamic vinyl coated knit backed fabrics in embossed and printed designs simulating the textures and appearance of the prestige of leather and woven fabrications.

Closed Conference

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Government sources said Wednesday that sessions of the Jan. 15 conference of oil exporting nations will be held behind closed doors "in the most complete secrecy."

Foreign observers, newspapermen and spectators will not be permitted to attend any of the sessions, it was reported. Only those delegates from nations affiliated with the oil exporters organization will be permitted to attend.

Delegations of from four to five persons each from Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq and Kuwait are to attend the conference.

Mines Still Present

TOKYO (UPI)—A Japanese defense agency reported Wednesday that 1,200 mines laid by United States ships in World War II still are undestroyed around Japan's coastal waters.

adding to the confusion. They were immediately replaced. Smoke ejectors were used by the firemen, who donned gas masks to enter the burning building.

They also used a power saw and an axe to get into the partition on the second floor front of the building. Flames were visible on two separate occasions near the roof of the front porch and were quickly knocked down by the firefighters.

During the height of the fire fighting operations, Lt. McDonald, who was inside the building, made his way to the front porch before he was overcome by the smoke.

He was quickly assisted to the street where he was given fresh oxygen from a pneolator manned by the firemen. A local mail carrier and nurse who were on the scene gave assistance.

Minutes after being revived, he was placed in the department's emergency truck and driven to the local hospital where he was kept overnight for observation.

Apartments Damaged

Damaged by the blaze and water was the two-room apartment in the basement, which also includes a storage room and furnace room.

Two apartments are located on the second floor. One is occupied by Miss Catherine Coleman and the other by Mr. and Mrs. Loring Parker.

Heavy fire and water damage was caused to the front section of Miss Coleman's apartment, although most of the apartment of the Parker's, with the exception of the front room, was not damaged as much.

The third-floor apartment, the least damaged, is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James Gormer and son.

Directing fire - fighting operations were Chief Virgil A. Parker and Assistant Chiefs Robert C. Long and Vincent Wegman. City police handled traffic on Washington Street.

The home was formerly owned by the late U. S. Senator George Wellington, who was elected to that office in 1894 and served for six years.

PTAs Would

als, now before the General Assembly, call for $2,687,072 for teachers' salaries, $671,769 in non-salary state aid, and $3,255,843 for school construction.

How Teachers Would Fare

The James Committee program would raise teachers' salaries from the state minimum of $3,200-$5,300 to $3,600-$5,700. Increases would vary from $1 in Baltimore County to $331 in Charles County, based on county averages. The average increase in Allegany County would be $204.

The MCTP - MSTA program would raise the state minimum to $4,000-$6,000. Average salary increases would range from $330 in Baltimore City to $653 in St. Mary's County. In Allegany County, the average salary increase would be $509.

Mrs. Bull and Mr. Hendrickson said the two organizations now are distributing 125,000 copies of a booklet contrasting the two programs.

They said the joint program would cost about $6,150,000, or $2 per capita, more than the James Committee proposals. Both said there's plenty of money available in the current state surplus, particularly since the teachers' retirement system will show a saving of $3,588,000 in the next budget.

If the surplus is used for some purpose other than education, the PTAs would support "any equitable tax measure required to provide the additional $6,150,000" for the MCPT-MSTA program, said Mrs. Bull.

But she emphasized that the state PTAs have not asked for tax measures whose revenues would be earmarked specifically for education, on the theory that fluctuation of revenues in different economic situations might not serve the best interests of the educational program.

Survey Shows Need For W. Va. Re-Assessment

Counties Losing Much Tax Revenue

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The Legislature was told Wednesday that West Virginia counties could raise an additional $16 million in property taxes by hiking assessments to the level of appraisals shown in a Tax Commission survey.

Tax Commissioner Don C. Carman told the lawmakers that property is assessed for tax purposes at an average of 53.07 per cent of the actual value shown in the spot-check survey.

The survey also showed that counties are raising only 52.59 per cent of the amount available if nearly - maximum rates set out in 1960 law were applied to actual values.

Carman said the survey showed assessed values in all counties totaled $2,991,124,769 which provided $17,691,000 in taxes. The statewide appraised value shown by the survey was $5,646,777,080 which would net $33.7 million in taxes.

The 1960 state aid law provides that if a county is raising less than 47.5 per cent of its "local share" under the state school aid formula, the school board may take part of the county court's levies to make up the difference. Until that law was passed, a county lost a percentage of its state aid equal to the number of percentage points which its assessments fell below appraised figures.

Key figures in the report to the Legislature were the percentage of assessed to appraised tax totals, showing whether a county was raising the required percentage of taxes locally. Those percentages ranged from 34.67 in Berkeley County to 76.73 in Wyoming County.

Four other counties exceeded 60 per cent. They were Boone, 67.88; Logan 63.17; Cabell 62.66 and Marion 60.17.

In the 20 counties below 50 per cent, assessors are given the opportunity to raise the percentage before school aid is doled out next year. Changes in county court tax rates are not made until July and August.

Brooke, 49.79, Gilmer 47.25, Hampshire 46.42, Hancock 44.11, Lewis 40.36, Mason 41.99, Monongalia 42.92, Pleasants 46.28, Preston 48.82, Tucker 49.86, and Wood 40.18.

Percentages for the other counties included:

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD—Could be if Jack Benny accepts Robert Lippert's offer to be "the voice of the Mamma Bear" in "The Teddy Bears"—I'll wind up in dutch with the Hollywood agents. Innocently, I got into this deal when Lippert told me how much he wanted Jack for the charming Disney-like fantasy which he is producing in color with a special musical score for 20th Century-Fox.

By happenstance, I reached Jack before Lippert did. After a brief moment in which Jackson must have thought I'd taken leave of my senses talking about a "mamma bear," he got the point. When I explained, Jack said: "It sounds cute. Have him send me the script." So off to Benny went the original by George W. George, who will produce under Lippert. (No, Jack—you won't have to pay me 10 per cent!)

The Hope Lange-Glenn Ford romance is chilling. They're good friends, but it's not the glowing attachment it was a few months ago. Glenn dates others, as does Hope. So we'll see what happens when Maria Schell comes back to town.

Glenn had dinner with Yvette Mimieux a few nights ago, and is getting around. Careerwise, he's been approached to do "Two for the seesaw," opposite Shirley MacLaine, but this would be far in the future because there's still "Pocketful of Miracles" in the offing after he finishes "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Stanley Kramer planes into New York Thursday with a press conference already lined up at which he'll tell the world he has signed Judy Garland for "Judgment at Nuremberg." I get it straight that this is the real reason Judy came to the U.S.A., from England at this time. It was rumored that she was huddling about doing "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" on the London stage—but that was never very solid and has now fallen through.

The best dressed actor in motion pictures is Jack Lemmon—and the best dressed actor in TV is Ricky Nelson—at least this is the way the Men's Apparel Club of California has voted its annual style award in the professional group.

What with Frank Sinatra's inaugural wardrobe from Don Loper getting headline attention almost everywhere, the boys are making as much style news as the girls this year.

An amusing slant on this is that while the Eastern stylists singled out President-elect John Kennedy as a "back dated" dresser (seems his lapels are too wide) the Men's Apparel Club, Western group, proclaims him as potentially the best dressed President since George Washington!

The youthful Aga Khan, who inherited his amazing grandfather's title, is living in keeping with the late Aga's luxurious traditions. According to a friend of mine who met him in Gstaad, Switzerland during the holidays. The young ruler has an entourage of 47 aides, including six ski instructors, and the entire party occupy two floors of the most expensive Gstaad hotel.

If the party is a beautiful 18-year-old German girl, Inge Traut, with her parents who are chaperoning her. Many things have happened to young Karim whom I first met when he was 12 years old, at Rita Hayworth's wedding to his father, the late Aly Khan.

Let all the surmises about Bob Hope's state of health simmer down. There's nothing like a little rest—and for the first time in his life Bob has been minding his doctors and getting some.

There will be no delay in starting Bob's MGM movie "Bachelor in Paradise" in March. And if you think Robin isn't rarin' to go, he leaves with Bing Crosby in June for London where they will make "The Road to Hong Kong." These are two big pictures within months of one another plus Bob's TV shows—the newest of which beams Thursday night. All in all, the facts of life about Mr. Hope are all to the good.

Coalition Halts Increase In W.Va. Sales Tax

Action Is Termed Temporary Setback

By BILL BARRETT
United Press International

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— A handful of Democrats joined with the small Republican minority to block immediate enactment of a temporary increase in the state consumer sales tax for a "crash" public works program as the 55th West Virginia Legislature got under way Wednesday.

However, Democratic leaders, who are strongly supporting the legislature - eve proposal of Gov.-elect W. W. Barron, called it only a "temporary setback." There were strong indications that another effort would be made Thursday to rush through the measure.

It takes a four-fifths vote to suspend rules requiring that a bill be read on three consecutive days and the vote in the House of Delegates fell seven short. It was 73-27, with 10 Democrats joining 17 of the 18 Republican in opposition.

The Senate didn't try to put the question to a vote after hearing of the House action. Both chambers did, however, suspend committee reference and moved the proposal to second reading Thursday.

Under normal procedure this would mean a vote by Friday—meaning the program could begin by Sunday as Barron requested.

The estimated $5 to $6 million from the 7½-month sales tax hike would be used to put about 5,000 more jobless West Virginians to work on such things and road and roadside park improvements.

The action overshadowed the usual first - day formalities connected with opening a new legislative session and the final "state-of-the-state" address by outgoing Republican Gov. Cecil H. Underwood.

Without incident, Julius Singleton, Morgantown, was elected House speaker and Howard Carson, Fayetteville, was named Senate president. They had been picked earlier in caucus sessions of the Democratic legislators.

In a joint session, just before Underwood spoke, the legislature also reviewed results of the 1960 general election and formally declared Gov.-elect W. W. Barron and other Democratic state-wide candidates elected. Barron will be inaugurated as the state's 26th governor on Monday.

Retiring W. Va. Governor Urges Greater Power And Longer Executive Tenure

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— Gov. Cecil H. Underwood, in his last formal appearance before the West Virginia Legislature made a strong pitch Wednesday for greater power and longer tenure for future governors.

"If I were to suggest the one reform of government which I felt most essential, it would be to strengthen the executive," he said in the annual state-of-the-state address. "At the very least, a governor should be the only elected executive officer in the state; he should prepare the budget; and he should be permitted to seek re-election."

Underwood also reminded the legislators that there was no money in the budget presented by the Board of Public Works for continuation of the "STEP" program, the medical care program for the aged and the property reappraisal program initiated last year. He strongly urged continuation of all three.

He cited advancements in roads and schools in the past four years but added, "Much remains to be done."

Discussing the state's economic situation, Underwood said the coal fields of the state can never be the same.

"To suggest that the coal industry will employ the large numbers of people that it once did, is both dishonest and dangerous," he said. "Coal will remain the greatest natural resource of our state, but it will never regain a monopoly on the fuel market of the world."

He suggested a continuation of the job re - training program so that workers "could be moved to where jobs are."

"Our assistance should be directed to eliminating the conditions in the coal fields rather than simply keeping them alive and there," he added.

"What we are, we have made ourselves," he said. "We need look no further than our own conscience for the cause of our problems. We are judged not by what we might have been but by what we are. Whatever our lot, we are judged in reaction to it."

West Virginia Legislators Presented 115 Million Dollar Operating Budget

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)— The Board of Public Works Wednesday recommended to the legislature a $115,093,032 operating budget for state agencies for fiscal 1961-62 with two-thirds of the total ticketed for education.

The budget is some $4.2 million below the current appropriations. It called for 67.38 per cent of the total to be spent for education, 19.19 per cent for health and welfare, 4.43 per cent for general government, 2.41 per cent for charities and correction and 6.59 for other services.

The Board estimated that the state could expect to collect $115,110,000 in taxes and other fees during the next fiscal year and that on June 30, 1962, it anticipated a cash balance of $84,287.

No mention was made of the $4.5 million now being spent for the State Temporary Economic Program or a $1.5 million request from the Tax Department to continue the property reappraisal program.

By doing this the board, in effect, left these programs up to recommendation from Gov.-elect W. W. Barron who will outline his program in an address to the lawmakers Jan. 18.

A boost in current appropriations of $213,762 to the fiscal departments of government and $492,844 to the State Health Department were the major hikes recommended by the board.

The Department of Finance & Administration would get $125,687 of the fiscal boost. A three year insurance policy on state capitol buildings would take $41,337 of this amount and $35,000 would be used for repairs to the buildings. Another $67,925 would be used to help Auditor-elect Denzil Gainer reorganize the department.

The additional money to the health department would be used to initiate a program of local health services. The department, for the past two years, has been trying to set up such a program which would reflect a drop in personnel at the state offices.

The budget shows that $77,455,091 would be spent for educational purposes, $22,067,758 for health and welfare, $5,094,084 for general government, $2,767,611 for charities and correction and $7,575,208 for other services.

A further breakdown shows:

General Government— Fiscal $2,465,647; judicial $1,031,780; legislative $861,000; executive $489,707; legal $164,870 and incorporating and recording $81,080.

Educational — State aid to schools $53,243,180; West Virginia University $8,752,662; State colleges $8,533,675; teachers retirement $5,723,178; state aid for exceptional children $235,000; textbook aid 150,000 and other educational $817,396.

Charities and correction— State prisons $1,581,348; industrial schools $652,987 and other charitable $533,276.

Health and welfare—Public assistance $10,466,480; mental health $6,498,215; tubercular sanitariums $1,753,270; health department $1,260,984; vocational rehabilitation $597,549 and other welfare $1,491,260.

Other services— Protection $3,043,943; business & industrial relations $1,820,830; conservation and development $1,024,740; agriculture $855,695 and social security matching funds $830,000.

Valley TV Plan Faces Financial Difficulties

Members Fail To Pay Pledges

MOOREFIELD, W. Va.—Pledges to the Valley TV Cooperative are coming in too slow and an immediate canvass will be made to collect unpaid funds. Charles Kuykendall, manager of the nonprofit cooperative, said that manufacturers installed translators and equipmen' and the communi-ti; is getting good signals.

The boarc of directors, meeting Tuesday afternoon, appointed Edwin 'Biddy' Allen as agent for the cooperative to get in touch with every person who indicated they desired a choice of channels for TV entertainment. More than $3,000 is outstanding in unpaid pledges. The board has made arrangements with the South Branch Valley National Bank to accept notes for the cooperative and members may make monthly payments if they are unable to pay all of the pledge now.

The board of directors also made a request of members who had paid the pledge to pay the annual maintenance assessment of $5 as soon as possible. The annual $5 fee is used to pay the monthly power bill, insurance, replacement of fuses and general maintenance.

Kuykendall said that a good signal is being received and that it will improve as more adjustments are made. He said that it would be a shame to have to discontinue service on one channel because of lack of funds. An additional hundred members are needed.

Allen said he would be making contact with the members almost immediately.

Community Council Plans Annual Election

Tri-Towns Area Projects Viewed

PIEDMONT — The Tri-Towns Community Council will hold a dinner meeting in March when the annual election of officers will take place.

Mrs. Arthur Hartman, president, appointed a nominating committee at the monthly meeting Monday evening in the Presbyterian Church.

The committee includes Edward Byron Green, chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Wilson, Ormal Hoover, Harris LeFew and Mrs. Elmer J. Shaver.

A president, vice president and two members of the executive, the latter to serve for three years, will be elected. The committee will report at the next meeting February 6. Nominations may also be made from the floor at that meeting as well as for members-at-large, the latter to be approved by the executive committee. A member-at-large is one who is not representing any particular organization and serves for one year.

Mrs. Hartman will appoint a committee to make arrangements for the dinner which will be "Dutch treat."

A survey for the proposed picnic area in the vicinity of Horse Rock, near Westernport, will be made when weather permits Alton Fortney, reported.

Mrs. Hartman announced that various members of the council are appearing before local organizations explaining the purposes and hopes of the Community Council.

Woman Scared By Monster

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va. (UPI) — A 19-year-old housewife was admitted to a hospital here Wednesday for treatment of shock after being badly frightened at her home by a man who "looked like a monster."

Mrs. Gene Chute of nearby Friendly told authorities when she returned home Tuesday night, a man leaped at her from the stairs to the living room. "He said all he wanted was my hair and kept repeating, 'raven black hair, raven black hair,'" she stated.

Mrs. Chute said the man grabbed her but let go when she pulled his ear. She said she fled to a neighbors house. The intruder was gone when police later checked her house.

The 5-foot-1 Mrs. Chute described the man as about 6 feet tall and weighing 190 pounds. She said he was bare - footed and "looked like he hadn't had a haircut in six months."

W. Va. Mine Where 361 Died, To Close March 1

MONONGAH, W. Va. (UPI) — King coal will soon die in this little coal mining community of 1,319.

The Mountaineer Coal Co. announced Tuesday it will close its Monongah mine, throwing the dwindled force of 100 men out of work, effective March 1.

This is the mine where 361 men died on Dec. 6, 1907, in an explosion and fire, the worst mine disaster in the nation's history. The mine was then owned by Fairmont Coal Co.

For this little town in Marion County, coal has been its very life. As the mine started petering out, people began leaving. In the past 10 years the population has dropped nearly 20 per cent.

Many West Virginia mines have closed in the past three years because of lack of business, but that was not the case here.

The reason for closing the mine —opened in 1890—is simply that it is worked out, George Higinbotham, president of the firm, said.

The last survivor of that disaster vividly remembered that cold, snowy morning in 1907.

Patrick H. McDonnell, Fairmont, said "I was about 50 feet outside when I met the explosion. A big gust of hot, black stuff hit me and nearly blew me from the trestle into the West Fork River."

The cause of the explosion, officially was the misfiring of an explosive charge. However, others though it was started when some coal cars severed some electric wiring.

The town had a population of some 3,000 at the time and the explosion killed about half the town's working force. Some 250 widows and 1,000 children were left.

Those who died in the disaster came from many lands. Various instructions were printed in seven languages at the mouth of the pit.

AHS Blows Big Lead To Suffer Second Defeat

By TED TROXELL

The twice-postponed battle between Martinsburg and Allegany finally came off last night at Campobello, although Coach Chet Payne of the Campers probably wishes it hadn't, as he watched his team blow a substantial second half lead and lose out in the closing minutes, 77-71.

Originally scheduled for December 16, the game was reset for December 22 when hazardous travel conditions prevented Martinsburg from making the trip here. Foul weather again caused a postponement until last night. In the meantime, the Bulldogs rolled along to a perfect 5-0 record, while Allegany shoved its mark to 6-1.

Campers Pull Away

Late in the third period, the Campers pulled away by 13 points, 59-46, but a one-hander by Doug Lamp, Jacobs' three-point play, and Bartock's jumper cut the margin to 59-53 as the quarter ended, and in the final frame the West Virginians cut loose for 24 points.

With Jacobs hitting from outside with deadly accuracy, the Bulldogs caught up with their hosts, who had led since midway in the second period, at 69-all. A jump shot by Jacobs knotted the count with about two minutes left, at which point the Campers, in spite of their experience, seemed to fall apart.

Moving the ball downcourt following Jacobs' bucket, the Campers got tied up at the midcourt line and out of the scramble came a personal foul against Allegany's Wayne Shook. Bartock, who converted eight consecutive free throws in the decisive fourth quarter, promptly dropped in the two that gave Martinsburg a lead it kept.

Two charity tosses apiece by Bartock and John Karns and a field goal by Lamp upped the Bulldogs' advantage to 77-69 over the Cumberlanders, who couldn't regain their composure. Mervin Pope hit on a layup with 10 seconds to go, but by that time it was all over but the shouting, and the small crowd of Martinsburg followers who journeyed here was doing plenty of that.

Luzier Hits Twice

With only four minutes to go, Allegany led by eight points, 67-59, after a pair of jump shots by Doug Luzier within the period of less than a minute gave the Campers some breathing room. At this point however, Luzier, a rugged cager who seems to give the Campers some life during his infrequent appearances in the lineup, was substituted for and watched the rest of the contest from the bench.

The first half found Allegany jumping off to a 41-33 lead, chiefly on the strength of a 21-25 performance at the foul line. The Campers were outgoaled, 13-10, but compensated for it at the foul line. Sixteen personals were called against Martinsburg in the first two periods. Gary Phalen, who tallied 11 of the Bulldogs 17 points in the opening quarter, fouled out with only 16 seconds gone in the second period.

Martinsburg wound up with a 29-23 edge in field goals. The Bulldogs, who took 71 shots from the floor, had a .408 percentage, while Allegany's average was just a shade lower at .404.

Bartock finished with 29 points to take game scoring honors. Eleven of his tallies came at the foul line, where he missed only twice in 13 tries. Pope made nine of 15 field goal attempts and converted six of nine free throws for a 24-point night.

Paul Price Scores 28 Points; Tornado Loses Fourth Tilt

KEYSER, W. Va.—Fort Ashby High's Eagles upended the Keyser High Golden Tornado here last night, handing Coach Estel "Eck" Miers' cagers their second straight defeat, 55-50, in a Potomac Valley Conference engagement.

The loss was the fourth in nine games for Keyser, normally a perennial contender for the PVC crown, and gave the Tornado a 3-3 mark in the conference. Fort Ashby upped its season's mark to 6-3 and is now 5-2 in the PVC.

The Eagles trailed 14-10 at the end of the first quarter but rallied to knot the count at 26-all at intermission. The visitors then edged ahead in the final half to register the victory. No more than five points separated the two teams throughout the game in the nip-and-tuck contest.

Coach Quentin Sayers' Eagles actually earned the verdict at the foul line where Fort Ashby tallied 23 of 36 chances. Outscoring the Eagles, 21-16 from the field, Keyser could only garner 8 of 15 free throws.

Paul Price was Fort Ashby's big gun with 28 points, 13 of them coming in the second period when the Eagles scored 16 times. He picked the Eagles up in the final period with a brace of goals after Keyser pulled within one point at 40-39. Charles Hinkle added three fouls to help pull his team further ahead.

Goalby To Seek Third Straight Golfing Victory

$20,000 San Diego Open Begins Today

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—Bob Goalby, armed with his magic wand putter, goes for his third consecutive golf tournament triumph Thursday when he tees off in the $20,000 San Diego Open.

Goalby, 29-year-old shot maker from Crystal River, Fla., won the Los Angeles Open on Monday and the last event of the 1960 tour at Coral Gables, Fla., in December.

"Naturally it would be nice to make it three in a row," said Goalby, who won $7,500 for taking first place in the rich Los Angeles event.

The tournament will be played on the long, flat Mission Valley Country Club within two miles of downtown San Diego.

The field includes most of the country's top professionals, including Arnold Palmer, the leading money winner, National Open and Masters' champion of 1960. Palmer made a different kind of headlines to start the 1961 campaign when he took a staggering 12 on the last hole of the first round of the Los Angeles Open. It was such a bad start that he fell out of contention after the first two rounds.

"I'll forget all about that and see what happens here," said Palmer as he prepared for this tournament.

Among the other top competitors are such men as former Open champ Tommy Bolt, who has won here twice; defending San Diego champion Mike Souchak, who didn't play exceptionally well in Los Angeles; local stars Billy Casper and Gene Littler; British pair Max Faulkner and Eric Brown; and Jay and Lionel Hebert.

6,182 Deer Slain During Maryland Hunting Season

The Maryland Department of Game and Inland Fish yesterday released an official figure of 6,182 deer reported killed during the 1960 hunting season. This compares to a total kill of 4,564 in 1959, the commission added.

There were 818 deer killed during the three-day anterless season on the Eastern Shore, the report stated.

In addition the department said some 103,980 evergreen trees, 600 hardwood trees and 403,380 shrubs were planted on state and private lands during 1960 to improve wildlife habitat.

The department also reported the completion of a survey of 3,619 acres of woodland on Dan's Mountain in Allegany County for a public hunting area.

AFL Owners Meet Today

Expansion Plans Are On Agenda

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—American Football League club owners Thursday begin their winter meeting, with no indication that heavy inaugural season financial losses have dampened enthusiasm for 1961.

There had been predictions from some areas a year ago the AFL would not get through its first season. But the eight club owners will begin two days of discussions with expansion as one of the items on the agenda.

No expansion is indicated this year but such cities as Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati, Seattle, Kansas City, Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., have figured in speculation on 1962.

There was definite indication, however, the league may authorize immediate transfer of the Los Angeles Chargers to San Diego.

Barron Hilton, owner of the Chargers, and K.S. (Bud) Adams Jr., owner of the Houston Oilers, are among the year's heaviest financial losers despite having fielded division champions.

The Los Angeles losses have been estimated as high as $900,000. Adams has placed his first season deficit at $710,000, plus $70,000 he spent while winning a court fight with the Los Angeles Rams over the services of Billy Cannon.

Warmath Named Coach Of Year

Association Picks Minnesota Mentor

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The American Football Coaches Association Wednesday night named Murray Warmath of Minnesota major college coach of the year and Warren Woodson of New Mexico State the minor college coach of the year.

The association said voting was close in both divisions with Jim Owens of the University of Washington and Clarence Stasavich of Lenoir Rhyne College, Hickory, N.C., finishing as strong runners-up in the respective divisions.

As coach of the Minnesota Gophers, Warmath took his team from last place in the Big Ten in 1959 to the Associated Press ranked national championship in 1960. Minnesota won eight of nine games in regular season play but lost 17-7 to Washington in the Rose Bowl.

Woodson coached the Aggies to an undefeated season after they had 21 losing seasons. New Mexico state went undefeated through 11 games last year, including a 20-14 victory over Utah State in the Sun Bowl.

NCAA Approves Three New Bowl Games In Long Session

Rule Limits Athletes To Five Years

Small Colleges Rebel Against Some Legislation

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The lawmakers for college sports ran into a small college rebellion Wednesday at one of the longest and windiest National Collegiate Athletic Association sessions in several years and wound up by passing only about half the controversial legislation that concerned in-season eligibility of players.

After disposing of non-controversial business early—including approval of three new football bowl games and the passing of a couple of restrictive rules about recruiting—the delegates talked themselves into a state of exhaustion and confusion before the session ended.

A key statement of "fundamental policy" barely mustered the necessary two-thirds majority. But a rule limiting college athletes to competition within five calender years passed by an unexpectedly large vote.

Compromise Rule

Under this rule, described as a compromise between the four-year limit originally suggested and the need to recognize hardship cases, an athlete must complete his eligibility within five years of the time he first registers at any college. The committee's original idea was to try to end the practice of holding a football player out of competition for one season when he's not needed and thus prolonging his educational process as well as his competitive career.

Two constitutional amendments that were tabled were a proposal for a national pre-registration program under NCAA control and supervision and a proposal for a national transfer rule. It was mainly the small colleges that objected to these propositions as designed to solve the special problems of the bigger members that engage in intensive recruiting.

Also passed was legislation to curb high school all-star football and basketball games and to discourage the importation of over-age foreign athletes.

Other activities were:

Confirming through the NCAA Council report that the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union have broken off their long-standing alliance. The NCAA said it no longer will respect AAU suspensions. The breach may be healed, however, as committees from both organizations are working toward a new alliance.

New Bowl Games

Approving three new bowl games—the Presidential Trophy at Washington, D.C., the Aviation Bowl at Dayton, Ohio and the Los Angeles Mercy Bowl.

Requiring that when a prospective athlete gets a visit to a college campus at the expense of someone who wouldn't normally pay the way, that person also must accompany him on the visit.

Ruling that colleges may not pay expenses for athletic talent scouts in recruiting and may not claim he is a staff member and entitled to expenses by paying him a regular fee.

The statement of policy, which put into the NCAA constitution that eligibility, financial aid, recruiting and admissions policies are a part of the association's business, passed by a 137-66 margin, mustering only one more vote than was necessary.

Cincinnati Signs Four New Players

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Wednesday the signing of four players to contracts and the assignment of six farm team managers.

Those signed were pitchers Marshall Bridges, Marv Fodor and Harvey Alex and second baseman Tommy Harper. Bridges had a 4-0 record as a relief pitcher with the Reds after moving up Aug. 2 last year.

The Reds also announced they have signed two young players into their organization. They are Bill Spalding, 19, a second baseman, Washington, D. C., and pitcher Roland Passaor, 23, Slatington, Pa.

Rinaldi, Ray To Meet Friday

The 24-year-old Italian from Anzio hopes to down the 25-year-old Chicagoan and prove his ability to met European titleholder Eric Schoepner of Germany.

Orioles Farm Director Quits

Dalton To Replace James McLaughlin

McLaughlin, 45, has been connected with major league baseball since 1939, when he became an office assistant to Bill DeWitt of the St. Louis Browns.

An Oriole spokesman said the resignation was accepted "with regret." He said he did not know McLaughlin's future plans.

President Lee MacPhail said Harry Dalton, 32, will be the new farm director. He has been McLaughlin's assistant for the past seven years.

Dalton, from West Springfield, Mass., was graduated from Amherst College in 1950. After serving three years in the Air Force, he joined the Orioles. He is credited with signing pitcher Steve Barber, who won 10 games in his rookie season with Baltimore last year.

Ralston Faces Tennis Censure

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Examiner says 19-year-old tennis star Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield very likely faces suspension from the United States Lawn Tennis Association for temper displays.

Ralston's case will be taken up "behind closed doors" at the USLTA's Executive Committee meeting in New Orleans on Feb. 3, the newspaper said Wednesday.

Galbreath Named "Man Of Year"

Galbreath was cited for guiding the Pirates for the past 14 years to the world championship last year. He also was honored for his part in giving the city the U.S. Steel-Mellon Building and for slum clearance activities.

Race Tracks Dispute Goes To High Court

Shenandoah Seeks Prohibition Writ

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—A dispute over racing dates involving two race tracks in Jefferson County and the West Virginia Racing Commission was taken to the Supreme Court Wednesday.

Attorneys for Shenandoah Downs race track asked the high court for a writ of prohibition against the Jefferson County Circuit Court. The writ, if granted, would prohibit enforcement of a writ of mandamus granted by the lower court at the request of Charles Town race track.

The dispute started when Charles Town and Shenandoah both filed for dates that were conflicting and overlapping. The commission rejected both petitions and suggested dates of its own.

Attorneys for the Charles Town track then obtained the mandamus order to prevent the commission from granting any dates until the dispute is settled.

Shenandoah claims that while it is technically not a party to the mandamus proceeding, it is being injured by enforcement of that order.

Ilsa Konrads Wins Freestyle Crown

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Ilsa Konrads won the 110-yard freestyle title for the third consecutive year Wednesday in the New South Wales swimming championships at the Sydney Olympic Pool.

Miss Konrads, who finished second twice in Tuesday's qualifications, clocked the distance in one minute, 04.4 seconds. Helen Bartier, who had the best clocking for the event in the qualifying round, and Ruth Everuss both were clocked in 1:05.9, but second place was awarded to Miss Bartier.

Molinas Loses Suit Against NBL, Podoloff

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Molinas, the basketball star who bet on his own team to win, lost his battle for reinstatement to the National Basketball Association Wednesday. His $3,000,000 suit against the league and its president, Maurice Podoloff, was dismissed.

In his decision, Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman said Molinas had "completely failed" to establish that any boycott conspiracy existed or that the defendants had given instructions regarding an alleged blacklisting of Molinas.

Molinas had charged Podoloff and the NBA with violating the anti-trust laws in instigating an alleged boycott against him in pro basketball after Molinas was suspended for betting on his own team, the Fort Wayne Pistons, to win in 1954.

All-Star Bowling Tourney To Begin Today In California

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) —The first All-Star Bowling Tournament in the West since the event's inception in 1941 gets under way Thursday.

Determined to make their first all-star visit to California a memorable one, the sponsoring Bowling Proprietors' Association of America has boosted the total prize fund to a record $68,150, more than $8,000 above last year's kitty in Omaha.

Most experts regard four-time champion Don Carter and defending champion Harry Smith, both of St. Louis as favorites of the 240 men's field.

Sylvia Wene of Philadelphia and Marion Ladewig of Grand Rapids, Mich., are generally regarded as the girls to beat in the field of 96 women.

Bisons To Play In Big Stadium

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bisons of the International Baseball League were assured Wednesday of playing their 1961 home games in spacious War Memorial Stadium.

Vikings Obtain Giants' Shaw In NFL Trade

Quarterback Pleased At New Chance

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (UPI)—The fledgling Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League secured veteran quarterback George Shaw Wednesday to guide the team through its first season next fall.

Vikings' General Manager Bert Rose said Shaw was obtained from New York in exchange for the Minnesota club's top draft choice in 1962.

Shaw, 27, a veteran of six years of professional ball, should "provide us with a steady job of quarterbacking in our first year in the campaign," Rose said.

Shaw said he did not ask to be traded as he did two years ago after playing for four seasons with the Baltimore Colts. But he said he is "thrilled at the prospect of being a charter member of the Minnesota club."

Rose hailed Shaw as "one of the finest passers in the league." The one-time University of Oregon star has a lifetime professional passing record of 310 completions in 601 attempts for 4,489 yards and 33 touchdowns.

Shaw's professional career has been played in the shadow of greater quarterbacks. He asked to be traded two years ago after the sensational rise of Johnny Unitas. And at New York, he always played in the shadow of Charlie Conerly.

Rose said rookie Francis Tarkenton of Georgia, who previously was signed, will be the team's No. 2 quarterback.

Wid Matthews Gets Post With New York Club

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wid Matthews, a major league baseball scout for 25 years, was named Wednesday assistant general manager of the New York club which will operate in the National League in 1962.

Matthews will scout and sign players, just as he did for the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers under Branch Rickey, and in recent years for the Chicago Cubs and Milwaukee Braves.

The appointment was announced by Charles Hurth, general manager of the New York club.

The 64-year-old Matthews, who once played for the Philadelphia Athletics and the Washington Senators, joined Rickey as a scout at St. Louis in 1935 and moved with him to Brooklyn in 1942. He switched to the Cubs in 1951 and to the Braves in 1957.

NEW YORK (UPI)—A leading baseball statistician predicted on Tuesday a flock of new records will be set when the major leagues go to a 162-game schedule "but nothing dramatic unless the new clubs are so weak they distort the picture."

"The extra eight games for the American League next year and the National in 1962 normally wouldn't threaten the big records like Babe Ruth's 60 home runs in one year," said Seymour Siwoff of the Elias Baseball Bureau which keeps official National League statistics and publishes the "Little Red Book" of official records.

"But if the new clubs turn out to be pushovers, particularly in pitching, anything can happen. You might have three or four sluggers hitting 65 home runs and certainly that would embarrass the game."

Lesser Marks To Fall

Lesser records will tumble by the dozens. They include things like games played, putouts, assists, strikeouts by batsmen, at bats and various other categories easily affected by the increase from 154 games per season to 162.

Last year, for instance the Yankees set a new league home run record of 193. That could go by the boards with eight extra games. So, perhaps, could the American League record of 70 games worked last year by pitcher Mike Fornieles of the Boston Red Sox.

"Everyone worries most about Ruth's record of 60 in 1927," said Siwoff. "But just adding eight games to the schedule wouldn't threaten that mark, according to the recent trend.

Pitchers On Top

"The pitchers lately have been getting the upper hand. Ernie Banks of the Cubs led the majors with 41 homers in 156 games last year. Mickey Mantle had 40 in 153 games and Roger Maris had 39 in 138. Obviously, the addition of eight extra games wouldn't help them make up the difference between that pace and Ruth's record."

There'd be a real worry, he said, if Mantle had a full season of hitting in Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, home of the new Angels.

"Mickey has so much power he could really bomb in that park," said Siwoff. "I understand they're planning to put a screen in left center but that wouldn't hurt him much. Bill Skowron and others with real power will like that park, too.

As the new general manager of the Kansas City Athletics, frantic Frankie will shake 'em up, shoot 'em around and almost certainly will move 'em up beyond their eighth-place finish of 1960.

Kansas City's problems of the moment have nothing to do with pennants. They have, however, "bought" themselves a general manager who's a positive genius at rescuing hopeless ball clubs.

It all started a dozen years and more than 400 trades ago.

"I got Billy Pierce and $10,000 to boot from the Detroit Tigers for a catcher named Aaron Robinson," says Lane.

That was on Nov. 10, 1948, his first major deal as the new general manager of the Chicago White Sox. Pierce went on to become one of the American League's great left handed pitchers. Lane went on to yank the White Sox out of the cellar and become one of the dizziest traders in baseball history.

Will Trade Anyone

He'll trade super-stars, home town heroes or what he calls "vest buttons" — players who don't mean much to anyone.

"When I was with the White Sox I got Nellie Fox from the Athletics for Joe Tipton," says Lane. "That was vest buttons. Except Fox turned out to be a star."

Lane lifted the White Sox from eighth to third in seven years, the St. Louis Cardinals from seventh to second in two years and the Cleveland Indians from sixth to second and back to fourth in thre years.

He talks a lot and follows it up with action.

"Why shouldn't I talk?" he snorts. "There's no point in keeping things to yourself. And certainly there's no point in keeping trade talks secret if you're trying to make a trade."

Talk Creates Interest

The point in talking, of course, is that it gets into the papers, the customers read it and interest in Lane's ball club is created where no interest may have existed before.

Lane doesn't mind talking about his boners, either.

"The worst deal I've made so far was trading Bill Virdon from the Cardinals to the Pirates for Bobby Del Greco," he admits. "When I boot 'em I do it up good."

But at Cleveland he also dealt off the likes of Minnie Minoso, Herb Score, Rocky Colavito and even Harvey Kuenn, for whom he swapped Colavito.

He traded Red Schoendienst from the Cardinals and once threatened to unload Stan Musial, until the citizens, led by owner Gussie Busch blew the whistle.

"Everyone makes bad deals," he says. "If I'm right 65 per cent of the time I figure I'm all right."

Lane has two bits of philosophy about his trades:

1. Don't try to cheat the other guy; he won't trade with you again.

2. Forget the player you traded away even if he turns out to be a star; if you want him back, make another deal for him.

Market Closes Higher On Late Buying Flurry

NEW YORK (UPI) — A buying flurry in the last hour enabled the stock market to finish with a modest gain on average Wednesday.

Prices which staged an irregular though ragged advance in the opening minutes, degenerated thereafter into a hodge podge of minor price changes.

Technicians have been making much of the fact that the market had reached a point where it was likely to encounter a band of stiff overhead resistance. The consensus in the street is that while individual issues may continue to give good performances, the general list was now susceptible to a short-term correction.

Chemicals led by Du Pont with a gain of 2⅛ were mostly firm. American Viscose added 1⅝ and Allied Chemical ⅞. Union Carbide lost a small fraction.

Steels, strong this week on a brighter outlook for orders and operations generally, showed losses of a half or more in National, Youngstown and Bethlehem. U.S. Steel managed to eke out a fractional gain at 80⅞.

Trading shrank on the rise to 4,370,000 shares from 4,840,000 the day before. A total of 1,271 issues crossed the tape and of these 608 advanced, 64 to new highs, while 449 declined, 5 to new lows.

All-State Choristers Leave

These Allegany County members of the All-Maryland High School Chorus are shown leaving for Washington yesterday on the B&O's Daylight Speedliner. They will sing with the chorus tomorrow night at the Eastern Music Educators Convention at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington. The boy friends of two of the girls in the group made an unscheduled trip with the choristers. The train pulled out while the young men were helping the girls with their luggage, and they weren't able to get off till the train got to Martinsburg. They hitched a ride back home, arriving about five hours later than they had planned.

Red 'Paradise' Drives People To Drink

BERLIN (UPI) — The East Germans have recognized that Communism is driving people to drink and have decided to do something about it.

The East Berlin Health Department has recommended a ban on all liquor advertising, increased production of soft drinks and establishment of police-run sobering-up stations.

The sobering-up plan envisages a physical examination of all drunks to see if they are diseased, their registration and notification of their employers. The drunks would pay the costs.

An anti-liquor campaign run by a Committee for Healthy Living was also recommended.

It disclosed that one-fourth of the persons brought to hospitals with injuries after 4 p.m. are drunk.

It said last year enough alcohol was sold in East Berlin to give every man, woman and child 4.15 quarts of wine, 4.73 quarts of spirits, and 81.1 quarts of beer.

Excessive drinking is not confined to East Germany. It has become a problem throughout the Soviet bloc.

Drinking probably has increased in all nations since World War II. But in Eastern Europe drunkenness almost has become a part of the Communist way of life.

It is thought that harsh economic conditions, unceasing propaganda and the extreme joylessness of life under Communism is driving people to drink.

Rowing Women Have Good Record

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) —Any Wednesday morning a group of sprightly matrons can be found expertly rowing navy whaleboats around Lake Merritt in the heart of Oakland.

Dressed in middies and blue skirts, the women, ranging in age from 33 to 85, stroke across the large lake in boats provided by the recreation department.

They are known as the Oakland Women's Rowing Club and, in the past 44 years, have become famous for their unusual recreation.

The club was started in 1916 by the late Mrs. Maud Aiken when a group of women decided that volley ball was a bore. It since has grown to 65 members with the longest membership held by Mrs. Julia Viereck, 72, who has been with the club 39 years.

And despite the advanced age of most members, none has ever lost an oar or fallen overboard.

A big moment came last year when the ladies rescued two young men who had capsized in a small sailboat. The young men? They were sailors on a busman's holiday.

Opening lead: Six of ♥

Proper defensive discarding as declarer runs a suit at no trump is a problem that besets even the more experienced player. Observe East's performance in today's hand.

West opened the six of hearts, and East played the encouraging nine. Declarer then proceeded to run the diamonds and East saw that he would have to arrange to make three early discards. The first one was easy, the three of hearts, completing his echo in that suit. Next came the seven of spades, signaling control of that suit, and then the jack of hearts for the purpose of unblocking the suit.

The important consideration is that East, looking at four clubs in dummy, must hold on to four clubs himself. Obviously West can have no more than three clubs for the two no trump bid marks declarer with at least two. If one of West's clubs is the jack, East's four to the ten will constitute a stopper.

If declarer has both the ace and jack of clubs, hope for defeating the contract must be abandoned. If it is pointed out that dummy has four spades, and that East may be concerned with holding four cards of that suit, there is a ready answer. If South has the king of hearts, his nine tricks are in plain view — four diamonds, two hearts and three clubs. It becomes clear, therefore, that East's only vital spade is the ace.

Declarer realizing his danger, tried to find a favorable club break and, when this failed to materialize, he led a low spade from dummy with the intention of sneaking in the king. But East rose to the occasion with his ace and returned the killing heart.

Navy Base Guard Old West Type

CHINA LAKE, Calif. (UPI) — Sewell (Pop) Lofinck is a throwback to the Old West. He almost has to be in his job—patrolling a desolate area bigger than the state of Rhode Island.

Lifinck is a security guard at this largest of naval test stations and his job is to keep people out o. the 1,700-square miles of rugged desert country used for testing the latest weapons.

He rides the range in a specially equipped Jeep, sometimes staying out by himself for as long as two weeks. He comes in to the test station only for supplies.

Pop — as he's affectionately known—carries a six-gun in a fast draw holster that he proudly uses with skill.

"Yep," admitted the Kansas-born Lofinck, "I guess I'm somewhat of a throwback. But I've been at this 13 years and I like it."

He's sort of vague about his age and birthplace.

"I'm from southeast Kansas," he said, "where all the nuts come from. Carrie Nation—you know—that kind. The trouble with people born there is that they're crusaders.

"Now I'm not a crusader—except against crusaders," he said.

Lofinck tried other worlds before he decided on this one—"No, I don't get lonesome, I read and I think."

He said he started out as a fur trapper, but became a salesman, a credit investigator and a commercial reporter "for all that money."

"But I got out and went back to nature," said the confirmed bachelor. "I didn't like all that pressure. And then, too, I found that when I was around people all the time, I didn't like them nearly as much as when I got off to myself occasionally."

Pop, who admits to being "sixtyish," is an expert trapper and made the first map of this area about 150 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

He stoutly defends his six-gun over a rifle. "It's always with you," he said. "And it's impressive—the bigger, the more impressive."

Apartments Damaged In 3-Alarm Fire

Fireman, Overcome By Smoke, Taken To Local Hospital

A local fireman, overcome by smoke, was hospitalized here yesterday afternoon during a three-alarm fire which caused heavy fire, water, and smoke damage to an apartment house at 306 Washington Street.

Lt. Harold L. McDonald, 33, of 1009 Lexington Avenue, was admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital where he was taken in the emergency truck of the local fire department. His condition last night was reported as "good."

The fire started in the basement apartment of the four-story brick and frame dwelling which is owned by Frank Gigliotti, and ate its way up through the partitions in the front of the structure.

Central and West Side firemen were called at 3:42 p.m., and 10 minutes later firemen from East Side station were called. Meanwhile, volunteers from nearby Ridgeley filled in at Central station.

Local firemen last night were investigating the origin of the blaze, which caused heavy damage to the basement and front rooms of the first and second floor apartments.

Three Flee Building

Three persons escaped from the burning building. Mrs. James Gormer who with her husband and son lives on the third floor, was lying down at the time the fire broke out. She ran outside.

Mrs. Oswald Gigliotti, who lives on the first floor with her husband and two children, escaped from the home with her four-year-old daughter Cathy.

Mrs. Gigliotti said she was ironing in one of the rooms of her apartment when her little girl, who had been playing with toys in the basement, came running up the steps crying. Her mother went to the basement and found one of the rooms smoke-filled.

Mrs. Gigliotti said she shut the door of the room and ran back upstairs to notify firemen. The smoldering fire which caused thick, billowy smoke apparently had a good start before firemen were called.

About 20 city firemen including off-duty men fought the stubborn blaze for over an hour. West Side was still on the scene last night.

Hoses Burst

Fire Scenes

Firemen from three local companies battle a stubborn fire in an apartment house at 306 Washington Street late yesterday afternoon (top photo) as spectators watch. The fire, which broke out in the basement of the home once owned by Senator George Wellington, caused heavy damage throughout the building.

Planning Board Offers Aid On Hospital Site

Hears Proposal Of Baltimore Firm

The Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission last night offered its services to the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph and the Sacred Heart Hospital's executive committee in securing a location for the Sacred Heart Hospital within the City of Cumberland.

The order recently announced plans for erecting a new modern hospital on a new site in Cumberland or the immediate vicinity.

The new hospital will provide 150 beds, 15 more than at the present Decatur Street location, and is estimated to cost about $3,500,000.

The commission also invited the firm of Whitman, Requardt and Associates, Baltimore, to prepare its analysis of the present and future needs of Cumberland.

Offer Services

Raymond C. Regnier, a partner in the firm, and John B. Gillett, project engineer, met with the board to offer the firm's services for preparing a master plan for the city.

Such a plan is needed to qualify Cumberland for federal aid in the housing and urban renewal fields.

The Baltimore company in 1947 prepared a master plan for Cumberland, which dealt chiefly with the city's needs in roads, utilities and public works. The new plan would update this study for today's needs.

One prime objective, it was explained, would be to do something about the "dead spots" left here as the move to the suburbs advances.

Plans were made to invite representatives of the Washington firm of Hayes, Seay, Matern and Matern to meet with the commission at its January 25 meeting.

Ask Ordinance

The commission recently authorized the Pittsburgh firm of Morris Knowles, Inc., to present a formal report on its proposal. This report is due soon.

At the suggestion of Albert S. Paye, chairman, the commission will also confer with the Cincinnati firm of Ladislas Segoe and Associates, which was selected as planning consultants for Allegany County.

The choice of a planning firm will probably be limited to one of these four, since they are considered representative.

The commission adopted a motion by Stanley Zorick, commission member, that the city engineer and city attorney cooperate in preparing an ordinance which would require all new buildings in the business area to be set back an adequate distance.

State's Education, Welfare Costs Upped

Pay Boost For Teachers Favored

By GEORGE BOWEN

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The estimated cost of providing more local aid for education and welfare climbed to $8,963,691 Wednesday while a movement swelled for even more pay for school teachers.

The earlier estimate of the cost to the state of putting into effect recommendations of the Legislative Council's Committee on Taxation for increasing local aid was $8,339,151.

That was based on data of two years ago, however. The revised up-to-date figures added more than $600,000.

Gov. Tawes has endorsed the additional aid, but said it should be accompanied by increased taxes even though the upcoming budget might be balanced without them.

Fiscal advisers have advocated collecting more taxes as a cushion for two years hence.

Among the latest to go on record opposed to this idea was Del. James C. Latham, D-Talbot.

"If a tax increase is not needed this year, I'm not in favor of it," he declared at a meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee which laid the groundwork for grappling with the money problems of the session.

A subcommittee headed by Del. Blair E. Lee III, D-Montgomery, was named to make a detailed study of the recommendations of the Legislative Council along with any conflicting proposals.

Compromise Plan

Among the prospective alternates reportedly gaining strong backing and expected to be introduced shortly in a so-called compromise plan authorizing more teacher pay.

It would provide $10.6 million for education as contrasted with $6.4 million of the council plan and $11.7 being sought by the Maryland State Teachers Association.

The compromise, which even before introduction was being given strong predictions of passage, would increase state minimum scales for teachers $600. They now range from $3,200-$5,300.

The council program would raise it $400. The teachers association proposes the starting scale be hiked $800 and the maximum $700.

Tawes is expected to call for lowering the base of the sales tax if it is decided to grant the increased education and welfare aid.

Cigaret Tax Hearing Set

The legislature already has been asked to impose a uniform state tax of six cents on a package of cigarets.

Opposition to this proposal will be aired at a hearing by the Ways and Means Committee next Wednesday.

Latham's resistance to collecting more taxes next year for use in the following budget is likely to pick up some support.

"I want my position to be known early," he said. "It seems bad to legislate for the future.

"We should face any tax increase when the time comes."

Tawes' budget is not due to be received by the legislature until Jan. 24. He started this fiscal year with a $12 million reserve fund and is expected to pick up another $11 million in surplus by June 30.

The only final action taken by the legislature Wednesday afternoon was in the Senate. It passed four of its bills, including one to require municipal governments to liquidate their liability for their employes in the retirement system administered by the State within 19 years. The bill now goes to the House.

Tax Exemption

Another Senate - passed bill would exempt Baltimore City bonds and stocks from taxation, making them more attractive investments.

Moves were renewed to establish a program of driver education in the public schools and to ban the sale of obscene literature to children under 18.

The driver education bill was sponsored in the House by Del. Edgar Silver, D-Balto 5th, chairman of the Motor Vehicles Committee, and Dels. Maurice Cardin, D-Balto 5th, Noel Speir Cook, R-Allegany, and Joseph Acker, D-Balto 3rd.

An identical bill was sponsored in the Senate by Sen. Aaron Baer, D-Balto 5th.

It would finance the program of driver education by increasing from $4 to $5 the fee now required for learner permits.

PTAs Would Support Taxes For Education

Ask Promise Schools Will Get Share

Maryland PTA leaders are letting it be known that they will support three tax proposals favored by Gov. J. Millard Tawes only if they are assured that education will get its share of the new revenues.

Mrs. Fred L. Bull, legislation chairman of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, said the PTA leaders are prepared to "go out and sell" the tax proposals to their members if they are given this assurance.

Mrs. Bull pointed out that Gov. Tawes has announced his approval of three revenue measures —doubling the state tax on cigarets, lowering the base of the sales tax, and placing a tax on restaurant meals.

"We're not asking for all the proceeds, but we'd like to know that the state's contribution to education will be increased by the new revenues," she said.

Mrs. Bull, who lives in Baltimore County, has been speaking to PTA groups in Western Maryland this week to outline a program for increased aid to education sponsored jointly by the MCPT and the Maryland State Teachers Association.

Speaks To County Groups

She spoke to the Garrett County PTA Council and the county teachers association Monday night, to the Allegany County Council of Parents and Teachers at Frostburg Tuesday night, and was in Washington County yesterday.

They reported that the Garrett County group voted unanimously to petition Gov. Tawes and the county's legislators to support the joint MCPT-MSTA program.

The Allegany County Council PTA Tuesday night took no formal action until hearing from member PTA groups, but Mrs. Bull said those attending supported the joint program.

The joint program calls for $9,453,145 in additional state aid for teachers' salaries and $2,274,081 in state aid for non-salary education costs. Total cost of the program is $11,727,226.

Trial Today In Hit-Run Accident Here

Stephen L. DuVall Faces Charge

Stephen Lee DuVall, 21, of 521 Woodside Avenue, driver of an automobile which police said struck and seriously injured a local woman on December 1, will be given a hearing this morning in Trial Magistrate Court.

DuVall, who has been charged in the hit-run accident in which Miss Marguerite Fahey, 56, of 447 Cumberland Street, was injured, is slated to be tried today at 10 a. m. before Magistrate Paul W. Barnett.

City Police arrested DuVall several days after the accident and after being questioned by County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya he reportedly admitted he was the operator of the vehicle which struck Miss Fahey.

The accident occurred about 5 p. m. on December 1 in the first block of Cumberland Street. Miss Fahey was on her way home from work when she was struck by the auto.

She sustained chin and neck lacerations, brush burns, a compound fracture of the left leg, and internal injuries. Miss Fahey was released from Sacred Heart Hospital just before Christmas.

The specific charge against DuVall is failure to stop and identify himself after being involved in a personal injury accident.

Authorities said the charge, upon conviction, carries a penalty of imprisonment from 30 days to a year, a fine of $50 to $1,000 or both.

Guard Company Plans Formal Inspection

National Guard Company C, First Medium Tank Battalion, 115th Armor, will conduct a formal command inspection January 18 at the Brown Avenue Armory by the battalion commander and staff officers.

Lieutenant Normad D. Messman, company commander said last night the inspection will be conducted by Lt. Col. Robert C. Matlick; Major Paul B. Lord, 1st Lt. Jonathan J. Eckhart; Captain Eugene M. Light and SFC Charles Griffith.

The inspection will include supply, administration, maintenance, and a line inspection of personnel. This will be the final formal battalion inspection before the annual general inspection February 1 by the inspector general's office, headquarters Second Army, Fort George G. Meade.

Jaycee Week Observance Opens Sunday

A proclamation urging all citizens of the city to help Jaycees observe the anniversary was adopted by the Mayor and Council Monday.

Jaycee week, which will run until Saturday, January 21, will be climaxed next Wednesday with the annual Bosses' Night banquet honoring bosses of all Jaycees here.

The banquet will be held at the Cumberland Country Club, beginning at 6:30 p. m.

Jaycee Week celebrates the founding of the Jaycee movement in St. Louis in 1915. It has expanded to an organization of a quarter million members in some 3,700 chapters in the United States. It has also spread through the world with the Junior Chamber International represented in 90 countries by 350,000 members in over 4,500 chapters, the third largest international club in existence.

Magistrates Endorsed By Democrats

The Democratic State Central Committee of Allegany County has endorsed all the county's trial magistrates for reappointment for a second two-year period, according to Thomas B. Finan, chairman.

The names have been submitted to Gov. J. Millard Tawes for his consideration and submission to the State Senate for final confirmation.

The committee also endorsed four persons for appointment as assessor-assistant, to fill a vacancy in the county assessment division which resulted after the death of Somerville Nicholson and promotion of J. H. Stitley to supervisor.

These four names, including William Kelly of Lonaconing, John Mullaney, Paul Stakem and Alfred Hutter of Cumberland, have been submitted to Albert Ward of the State Tax Commission as recommendations from the committee.

The State Central Committee also considered plans for a fund-raising Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner to be held in March or early April. Leslie J. Clark was named to coordinate plans for the affair with the Democratic Women's Club and the Young Democratic clubs.

Mr. Finan said several other routine matters were discussed by the committee and several other pending appointments were outlined but no formal action was taken.

The magistrates endorsed for reappointment include Paul Barnett and F. Allen Weatherholt for Cumberland; Louis Fatkin of Westernport for juvenile magistrate; Harold C. Naughton for substitute magistrate; Frank T. Kelly and Edward P. Flanagan for Frostburg; Browne Kooken for Westernport; Joseph McKenzie for Barton; James McPartland for Lonaconing; John Meyers for Midland; Thomas Stephens for Mt. Savage; Thomas Barton for Cresaptown; Ned Hose for Oldtown and Russell Nierman for Flintstone.

Present two-year terms expire May 1.

Tomorrow Is Friday 13th

And there will be only one other such Friday during the year. That will be during October.

Frostburg Man Robbed On Street

A Frostburg man was attacked by two persons who took money from his billfold late Tuesday night, police of that community said.

Emory Layman of 15 Beall Street was going home about 11:30 p. m. when he was attacked on Broadway.

Police said the two persons jumped the man, who was unable to get a description of either one.

Mr. Layman said he was thrown to the ground and his arms were pinned down by the two persons, who went through his pockets and took money from his billfold.

Woman Hurt In Auto Crash

A 33-year-old Lonaconing woman was hospitalized last night with injuries sustained in a one-car accident on State Route 55 about a mile south of Clarysville.

Mrs. Elsie Doris Bell, of 64 Douglas Avenue, suffered bruises about her body, according to state police, who said she was unconscious a short while after the accident at 7:25 p.m.

Attaches at Miners Hospital said the woman was in shock when admitted to the hospital for X-rays and observation. Her condition is "good," they said.

Trooper Leonard F. Glenn, investigating officer, said the accident occurred when Mrs. Bell was traveling alone in a northerly direction on the highway.

A charge of failure to keep to the right of the center of the highway has been placed against the woman, police said.

Delivery Starts Today On New Phone Books

Delivery of more than 32,000 1961 telephone directories to residences and businesses in Allegany County, Ridgeley and nearby Pennsylvania will begin today.

The continued growth in this area is reflected in the new directory, as it shows an increase of 26 pages and over 2,000 more listings than the 1960 directory which was distributed last January.

Local persons who have been hired to deliver the new directories will start distributing them to homes and businesses this morning. These persons also will pick up the old directories when the new ones are delivered.

It is expected that the delivery will take about four or five days.

During the past several years, the Allegany County telephone book has grown by over 10,000 listings to the present number of over 2,000 listings in the new directory.

Phone company officials suggest that subscribers go through their present books and remove all notes and personal papers they sometimes file in the telephone directory.

Because there have been numerous changes in listings and numbers, customers should look up all numbers in the new book before calling. Over 22,000 changes will be reflected in the 1961 book.

One significant new listing in the new directory is the number to dial to obtain the correct time of day. By dialing PA 2-8282, telephone customers may secure the correct time at any time.

The cover of the new directory is light tan and features a color renedering of the new state office buildings in Baltimore.

Another feature of the new book is that each number contains just two letters and five numbers. Previously many of the various exchanges were spelled out. The new format makes the phone numbers easier to read.

Blood Bank Says Thanks To CUF

The current "Thank You" theme of County United Fund activities takes on special meaning here today—the 13th anniversary of the establishment of the first Red Cross regional blood center in the United States.

Fresh from its most successful campaign to date, CUF embraces three Red Cross chapters that have saved nearly a million dollars in blood charges for area residents, providing free blood in emergencies that would cost an average of $35 a pint in areas where there is no free blood bank.

All three chapters — Allegany County, Mineral County and Piedmont — are associated with the Johnstown regional blood center, which is patterned after the first one established at Rochester, N. Y., on January 12, 1948.

"This is a good time to pass on to the 20,000 supporters of County United Fund the thanks that pour into the three area Red Cross chapters," Winfield H. Adam, CUF executive director, said last night. "Throughout the year, volunteer Red Cross workers, volunteer donors and volunteer givers unite to save lives as well as money for all residents of Allegany and Mineral counties who are in need of blood service."

University Control Of Frostburg State Aired

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Conversion of Frostburg State Teachers College into a Western Maryland branch of the University of Maryland was being mentioned Wednesday as a possible alternative to a broader, highly controversial plan for university expansion.

Administration sources said the idea is being discussed primarily in Western Maryland and has not yet been presented directly to Gov. Tawes.

Whether legislation will be introduced to carry out the conversion probably will depend on the amount of support the idea gets from political and economic leaders in Allegany County.

The State Department of Education is certain to oppose the proposal as it did a broader program recommended by a study commission headed by Edwin Warfield III, Harford County publisher.

The Warfield plan, now deferred by the administration for further study, suggested conversion of the colleges at Frostburg, Salisbury and Towson into university branches.

Meanwhile, the university's Board of Regents has tentatively decided to establish an undergraduate branch in the Baltimore area.

Hints He Favors Cut If Loopholes Can Be Plugged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Douglas Dillon, a Republican picked as secretary of the Treasury by President-elect John F. Kennedy, Wednesday ruled out any immediate plans for a temporary tax cut to spur the sagging economy.

But Dillon left the door open for such a possibility in the future. And he indicated he would like to see income taxes—particularly in the high brackets—slashed permanently if the money lost by that can be replaced by closing tax loopholes.

In testimony Wednesday to the Senate Finance Committee, which is considering his nomination, Dillon assured the senators that he regards as sacred the traditional power of Congress over taxes.

Power Shift Up To Congress

Dillon said Congress would have to decide whether to give the president power to fix tax rates to cope with changes in the nation's economy, as recommended to Kennedy by one of his task forces. Dillon said it would be most unusual for Congress to delegate its taxing authority to the executive branch.

The committee was the first to start informal hearings on Kennedy's Cabinet appointments, which can't be formally submitted until after he becomes president. But unless there is an unexpected hitch, all 10 Cabinet selections are generally expected to be ready for Senate confirmation as soon as Kennedy submits their names.

Served Under Eisenhower

Dillon, one of two Republicans selected by Kennedy for his Cabinet, is a New York investment banker. He served in the outgoing Eisenhower administration as undersecretary of state.

Some Republicans have expressed concern that Dillon, as a Republican, might serve as a "fall guy" in the new Kennedy regime. And some Democrats have privately wondered whether Dillon might try to slow down some of the economic and welfare programs pledged by their party.

Uruguay Police Seize 131 Reds In Wake Of Riot

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) —Police stormed headquarters of the Communist party Wednesday and seized 131 persons in a drive to check demonstrations supporting Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

The campaign has been building up for months. It reached a climax Tuesday night when one man was killed and scores were injured in battles between pro-Castro elements.

A huge demonstration has been called for Thursday by Communists and other Castro partisans. The army and the police were mobilized to head off further violence.

About 1,000 leftists marched on an anti-Castro rally of 3,000 in Independence Square, in front of government house, Tuesday night and tried to break up their meeting. Police chased the leftists through the downtown avenues. The fighting spread through an area of 20 blocks.

The rioters used sticks and stones. The police threw tear gas. Some shots were heard. Storefronts were shattered and some of the injured were hurt seriously. More than 50 rioters were arrested.

Then leftists gathered in front of Communist headquarters. An anti-Castro partisan who appeared was beaten unconscious.

When the man died, the leftists fled into the building. Police took up positions around the building with orders to arrest anyone who came out.

Wednesday morning a judge ordered the police into the building to search for the man's killers. Among those arrested were 15 women political and labor leaders. Police said they found small arms and subversive pamphlets.

Red Hit As Bullet Spans Iron Curtain

BERLIN (AP) — West Berlin police said Wednesday one of their men accidentally fired a rifle while loading it and apparently wounded a Communist policeman in East Germany.

A police spokesman said the shot went off inside a police hut at suburban Lichtenrade, went through the wall and across the border.

Production Lag Hits Cuba; Too Many Soldiers

HAVANA (AP)—Cuban agencies have appealed for volunteers to help in sugar and industrial production, lagging because of the call-up of thousands of worker-militiamen.

Battalions of women, children and retired workers are sought to fill the gap while Fidel Castro's citizen soldiers remain on war footing against what he calls the threat of invasion from the United States.

Announcements indicated the volunteers are expected to work without pay as a contribution to Castro's revolution. Regular workers summoned for militia duty receive wages from their employers while in uniform.

It is 12 days since Castro mobilized the island's workers from farms and factories and the natural result has been a slump in all forms of production.

Newspapers and radios broadcast appeals for young and old to join work battalions to harvest Cuba's sugar crop—mainstay of a faltering economy—and help man factories and mills.

The National Federation of Sugar Workers, many of whose 500,000 members are on duty in militia units, called on all Cubans "including retired workers and children" to sign up for emergency jobs. Cane-cutting has started and grinding is under way in this first annual sugar season completely under government control.

A group of government-operated textile mills announced the enlistment of "patriotic brigades of volunteer workers" to help maintain output of cloth.

Sub's Polaris Shot Is Failure

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI)—A Navy Polaris missile fired from a submerged nuclear submarine Wednesday made a fiery return to the ocean less than a minute later when it went out of control and was blown up.

The mishap, fifth in 14 underwater tests involving subs, apparently delayed slightly the Navy's plans to send the USS Robert E. Lee on its way to Charleston, S.C., to receive a store of 16 nuclear-tipped Polarises.

The Robert E. Lee must make at least one more successful shot before it can go on duty as the nation's third Polaris-firing submarine.

The slender ship, with one successful test already under its belt, launched the bottle-shaped rocket at 1:40 p.m. EST.

Ex-Nazi Faces Trial

KARLSRUHE, Germany (AP) —Charges of murder were made Wednesday against a former brigadier general of the Nazi SS Elite Guard in the wartime massacre of more than 2,000 Lithuanian and Ukrainian Jews. The officers, Erich Ehrlinger, and seven other lesser ranks of the dreaded SS will probably face trial here this fall.

Georgia In Last-Ditch Fight Against Integration

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI)—State police used tear gas Wednesday night to break up a demonstration by rock throwing students outside the dormitory of a Negro coed at the University of Georgia.

MACON, Ga. (AP)—Weary attorneys for the state move back into federal court at Macon Thursday for a last-ditch fight against decrees which have brought integration to the previously all-white University of Georgia and written new pages for the history books.

The lawyers headed by the segregationist attorney general, Eugene Cook, will plead with U. S. Dist. Judge W. A. Bootle to dissolve an injunction which kept Gov. Ernesto Vandiver from closing the 175-year-old university at Athens Tuesday, until a conflict between state and federal laws could be ironed out by legislative action.

Vandiver and the attorneys have been thwarted at every turn for six days in their crusade to either preserve segregation or, if it must be killed, let the state itself do the killing.

The governor, before issuance of Bootle's order was prepared to close the university until next Monday. He said in the interim the legislature could repeal a section of law providing that no state funds can be used to operate an integrated college.

State officials predicted Wednesday that a decision by Bootle to make the injunction permanent would be coupled with a decision that the state law is void. That would do away with any moves to repeal it.

Program Speedup, Better Leadership Called Imperative

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The United States will probably lose the race to fire a manned space vehicle into orbit around the earth, President-elect John F. Kennedy's space task force reported Wednesday.

The group called for an urgent effort to develop a more powerful thrust for spacecraft—the field in which the Soviet Union has been consistently ahead—and said better leadership of the whole military and civilian space program is imperative.

Missile Lag Reported

The task force pictured this country as lagging not only in the prestige-packed competition for the first man in space, but in developing military missiles needed for a secure deterrent force and supersonic commercial craft for the tasks still left to winged airplanes.

Kennedy headquarters here made the task force report public without saying what Kennedy thought of it—but announced naming of the task force chairman, Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientist Jerome B. Wiesner, to be the incoming President's special assistant for science.

Kennedy returned to the family home in Palm Beach early Wednesday after flying down from a busy half-day in Washington, which included delivery to him of the space report.

Kennedy Calls On Hoover

His engagements were a golf game and a call on former President Herbert Hoover, who came to Florida for the dedication of a dike named for him.

His only announced business for the next few days is work on the address he will deliver at his inauguration Jan. 20.

However, appointment of George W. Ball as undersecretary of state for economic affairs, completing the top echelon of the new State Department, was announced. Ball, a Washington lawyer specializing in international practice, is also a close political associate of Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 and 1956 Democratic presidential candidate who will become ambassador to the United Nations in the new administration.

Kennedy Plans TV Press Quiz

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—John F. Kennedy will hold the first presidential news conference to be televised live on Jan. 25, five days after his inauguration.

His press secretary, Pierre Salinger, said Wednesday arrangements have been made for the conference to be carried over the three television networks and their associated radio networks, the Mutual radio network and independent outlets.

The conference will begin at 6 p.m. EST. Salinger said the broadcasting companies are reserving one-half but that the length of the conference, as has been customary, will be determined by the newsmen who ask the questions.

Salinger said the conference will be in the auditorium of either the Commerce or State department building in Washington.

President Eisenhower has held his news conferences in the ornate Victorian Treaty room in the old State Department building. Newsmen have criticized the acoustics there.

Hemingway Treated For Hypertension

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Novelist Ernest Hemingway's ailment was described as hypertension by a spokesman Wednesday at the Mayo Clinic, where the 62-year-old author has been under treatment since Nov. 30.

Hemingway is to be released after the next two weeks. His condition is considered satisfactory.

While he has received medical treatment, Hemingway has not required surgery and none is contemplated, the spokesman said.

Rocket-Toting U.S. Planes Aid Laotian Cause

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Four U. S.-made T6 observation planes, armed with rockets and machine guns, took off Wednesday for the two main fronts of the Laotian civil war.

No responsible officer would say whether the planes, donated as part of the U. S. military support program for Laos, were on combat missions or simply making a show of strength.

Laotian officers said they were sent to the area of Vang Vieng, an important rebel base between Vientiane and the royal capital of Luang Prabang to the north, and to the strategic Plaine des Jarres in north-central Laos.

Unconfirmed reports said they had returned with rockets gone and guns empty from an attack on the Vang Vieng airstrip, rearmed, and took off again.

The planes are the first potential fighter planes in the air force. They can carry two 100-pound bombs each, and can be used for strafing or bombing.

The Laotian government hinted it might turn them against Soviet planes now airlifting arms and ammunition to the leftist rebels of Capt. Kong Le in the Plaine des Jarres area.

Ike's State Of Union Message Due Today

He is expected to follow his past practice of dealing largely in generalities in the message, with specifics reserved for his budget message which will go to Congress next Monday.

Two days later Eisenhower will submit his final economic report. It will be his last major message to Congress before leaving office Jan. 20.

Censorship Imposed By Haiti Government

PORT - AU - PRINCE, Haiti (UPI)—The government Wednesday imposed official censorship of news dispatches leaving and entering Haiti. There was no immediate explanation for the restriction.

The new development came within 24 hours of Haiti's expulsion of Msgr. Remy Jerome Augustin, auxiliary bishop of Haiti, and four other Roman Catholic priests on undisclosed charges.

Navy Building Guard On Shooting Spree Kills Two, Ends Life

WASHINGTON (AP)—A guard at the Navy Building shot down his wife and two coworkers Wednesday, fired several shots at a doctor, and then put a bullet in his own head.

The death toll was three: the guard, the wife, the doctor.

Before ending his life, the guard John Pledger, 40, told an old friend: "I shot Zelma. I shot Dr. Gregory. I did. I did. I shot someone else, but I don't know who."

Pledger, a uniformed guard at the main Navy Building, entered the office of the Bureau of Ships in an adjoining building.

His estranged wife, Zelma Pledger, 32, worked in an alcove in that office.

Augustus Valentine, 37, and Theodore Wells, 38, two of Mrs. Pledger's coworkers, also were in the alcove when the 6-foot, 200-pound Pledger entered.

He began shooting at his wife, from whom he was legally separated a year ago. In obtaining the separation, Mrs. Pledger had charged that her husband had threatened twice to kill her.

Wells tried to leave, but Pledger, carrying two pistols, slammed the door. He fired one bullet. It struck no one. Wells reopened the door and ran down the corridor. Pledger fired three times. One bullet went through Wells' arm and chest.

Then Valentine tried to flee. Pledger fired twice. Two bullets struck Valentine in the back.

Mrs. Pledger tried to escape. Pledger fired three more bullets. They struck his wife, and she fell in the corridor.

Pledger left the building, and drove off. He stopped to phone the General Services Administration, the agency which acts as custodian for all government buildings and, thus, his employer.

Pledger reported the shootings but assured the GSA he had not used his government gun.

Pledger stopped a few blocks away from the Navy Building at the office of Dr. Monroe G. Gregory, 50, of Annapolis, Md. He and Gregory scuffled.

Pledger's gun fired. Gregory was shot three or four times in the upper arm, left hand, and chest. Five slugs struck the wall of the room.

Pledger then went to the home of a long-time friend, Cora Green, 71. After telling of the shootings, he left the home of Mrs. Green and walked around the corner into a vacant lot. Mrs. Green called police. Pledger fired one more shot from his .38-caliber pistol.

Jackie Will Restrict Inaugural Activities

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — On advice of her doctors, Mrs. John F. Kennedy will restrict her participation to main inaugural ceremonies and festivities in Washington next week.

Pierre Salinger, press secretary to the president-elect, said in announcing this Wednesday that the next first lady is having a normal recovery from the Caesarean birth of a son Nov. 25.

Vessel Carrying Emigres Sinks; 40 Feared Dead

GIBRALTAR (AP) — A small Spanish-owned vessel believed to be carrying about 40 illegal emigres bound from Morocco to Israel foundered in heavy seas off the North African Coast Wednesday.

Rescue vessels in the western Mediterranean reported Wednesday night they had picked up three crewmen survivors and bodies of 23 men, women and children.

Moroccan officials said the craft was taking Jews without exit permits from Melilla to Israel via Gibraltar.

They said heavy seas drove it onto hidden reefs off Alhucemas where it sank about 10 miles off the coast.

The craft was identified as a 65-foot motor vessel registered in Honduras and owned by Spaniards. It carried a Spanish crew.

Spanish reports had indicated the mayor of Gibraltar, J.A. Hassan, and his family might have been aboard as cruise passengers but they were located later at his residence. Hassan, who is Jewish, expressed deep regrets over the sinking.

Algeciras coastal radio, in nearby Spain, said reports from rescue vessels said the ship, named the Price, sprang a leak in the bow and sank within minutes in the Bay of Alhucemas. The bay is about 150 miles southeast of this British crown colony at the tip of Spain. The radio said the suddenness of the leak prevented the Price from sending a distress call.

The traffic in transporting Jews from North Africa to Israel has increased lately since curbs on Jews have become stricter in Morocco.

Debate Cutoff Question Sent To Committee

Issue Sidetracked By Vote Of 50-46; Blow To Liberals

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate voted 50-46 Wednesday to refer its fight over filibusters to the Rules Committee.

Thus the Senators tossed aside the hot potato they have been juggling since Congress convened on Jan. 3.

The action was taken on the plea of Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, who urged that the way be cleared for prompt consideration of the Kennedy administration's program.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois supported Mansfield's motion, but the assistant Republican leader, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel of California, called it "a tragic mistake."

Party Lines Broken

On the vote, 18 Republicans and 32 Democrats, including a solid line of Southern members, backed Mansfield. Against them were 31 Democrats and 15 Republicans.

It was the first Senate roll call vote of the session.

Senators seeking a change in rules that would make it easier to stop filibusters rated the action a setback. They felt they were in a better position strategically at the start of a new session, when rules are being adopted, than they will be later.

Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D-N. M., author of one proposal to modify the rules, told the Senate as the vote approached that "there will be no amendment unless we do it here and now."

"Repercussions" Predicted

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N. Y., predicted the vote "will have major repercussions on policy and politics.

"There will be a rockier road ahead for civil rights and other needed legislation—and for the 'New Frontiers'—because of it," Javits said.

The New Yorker was one of a bipartisan group of 23 Senators backing a proposal to permit debates to be limited by the vote of 51 senators, or a majority of the 100 members.

The rule they wanted changed requires a two-thirds majority vote to invoke a time limit on debate.

Rayburn Offers "Painless Way" To Resolve Row

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Sam Rayburn Wednesday came up with what he called "the painless way" to resolve a liberal vs. conservative row over the House Rules Committe.

Instead of ousting one conservative, the plan calls for adding two more liberal Democrats to the committee, plus another Republican.

As outlined to newsmen, the compromise endorsed by Rayburn would avoid the purging of Rep. William M. Colmer, D-Miss., from his top ranking place on the committee.

However, Colmer, who bolted the Kennedy-Johnson ticket last fall, and Chairman Howard W. Smith, D-Va., stand to lose their battle against dilution of their power through enlargement of the committee's membership.

"I'm for this plan because I think it would be painless for everybody," Rayburn said.

Rayburn said the compromise plan for ending a row that has simmered since Congress convened last week will be submitted to a Democratic caucus next week and he expects overwhelming approval.

Under the plan, Rayburn and other Democratic leaders would appoint two more Democrats and the Republicans would be given one more seat on the committee.

However, if the two new Democrats named by Rayburn are liberals as expected, Smith and Colmer no longer would be able to team up with Republicans on the committee to block or delay liberal-backed legislation of the kind which President-elect John F. Kennedy has endorsed.

Chair Rules SS Health Plan Conference Victor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the White House Conference on Aging had to settle a disagreement Wednesday among delegates over the medical bills of older people.

Chairman Robert W. Kean, former New Jersey Republican congressman, in effect declared those favoring a Social Security health insurance plan the winners.

As a result, it's expected such a plan will become a part of a final report from the conference which will be submitted to President-elect John F. Kennedy and Congress.

Kean made his ruling after two sections of the conference took opposing stands, one voting that Congress enact a health insurance plan tied to Social Security and the other voting that present legislation was adequate.

The difference resulted from the peculiar structure of the conference, which gives the right to make final recommendations to 20 different sections of delegates.

Each section was given the responsibility of making recommendations on different aspects of the problems of the nation's older reneration.

The entire conference of 2,700 delegates will not vote on recommendations.

The vote favoring the Social Security approach was taken by the section on income maintenance—the one which conference officials had formally given the task of making recommendations on financing medical care for the edlerly. The vote was 176-99.

The opposing view came—by a 165-122 vote—from the section on health and medical care, which was supposed to deal only with means of improving health and medical care.

Kean solved the conflict by directing the chairman of the health and medical care section, Dr. Leonard W. Larson, president of the American Medical Association, to have his group withdraw its formal opposition to social security health insurance.

Astronauts Ready But U.S. Equipment Not

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (AP)—Are America's astronauts physically and psychologically ready to go? Said one Wednesday: "We can give you a one-word answer—yes."

But his superior quickly pointed out that while the seven spacemen may be ready to go into orbit, America's equipment still isn't ready to send them there.

Hopes were expressed, however, that the United States may orbit its first spaceman before the end of 1961.

At a news conference, Dr. Robert R. Gilruth, director of the Project Mercury man - in - space program, reported that space technicians are working on a program to strengthen the Atlas booster rocket. The rocket has had two vital failures. And present plans call for the United States to use the Atlas in launching the first astronaut.

Lt. Col. John E. Glenn Jr., of the Marines, was the astronaut who said he was ready right now to fly into space. Glenn said he spoke for the other six, too.

Reapportionment Plan By Population Pushed

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Backers of a plan to reapportion strength in the Maryland Legislature strictly on the basis of population began signing up co-sponsors Wednesday.

The proposal, most drastic of many reapportionment plans floating about the legislative corridors, was fathered by the Maryland Committee on Fair Representation.

Royce Hanson, American University faculty member, and Orphans Court Judge Bess Levine, Prince Georges County chairman of the committee, headed an advance party seeking sponsors of the bill in the legislature.

Within a short time they had promises of sponsorship from all members of the Prince Georges, Montgomery and Baltimore County delegations, many members of the 36-member Baltimore City delegation, and Del. John Hanson Mitchell, D-Charles.

The committee has led the fight to give more populous areas a stronger hand in state governmental affairs, which are now controlled by rural lawmakers.

Its proposal would increase membership in the House from 123 to 150 and in the Senate from 29 to 50 and would allot seats on the basis of the latest population count. Necessary revisions would follow each census.

Gov. Tawes endorsed another reapportionment plan in the 1960 legislature, but it failed. Proposed by a commission under Cumberland lawyer William C. Walsh, it called for immediate enlargement of the six-member delegations from the four metropolitan area counties — Prince Georges, Montgomery, Baltimore and Anne Arundel — with additional seats later for growing but still predominantly rural counties.

Tawes has indicated the Walsh plan may come up for a second try this year, but in the meantime he is closely watching the progress of a similar proposal already introduced by Sens. James A. Pine, D-Balto County, and Edward S. Northrop, D-Montgomery.

This calls for the immediate addition of four seats to Baltimore County; three each to Prince Georges and Montgomery; two each for Anne Arundel County and Baltimore's 3rd and 5th legislative districts, and one each for St. Marys, Charles, Howard and Harford counties.

Bike Rider Beats Cars, Thousands Across New Span

NEW YORK (AP)—Thousands waited afoot and in cars Wednesday for the ribbon-cutting ceremony opening the $92-million Throgs Neck Bridge connecting Long Island and the Bronx.

Was it a car? A motorcycle?

The speck grew and soon all could see.

It was a boy on a bike—the first vehicle across, even if it did beat the gun.

Russ Shake Up Farm Ministry

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union Wednesday announced a top-to-bottom reorganization of the Agricultural Ministry in an apparent effort to solve food production problems.

The minister's new function, the Central Committee was told, is to coordinate scientific developments with farm management to increase output. The ministry has been largely administrative.

The reorganization follows a Soviet agricultural emergency that developed with two successive years of bad weather and poor farm management.

It was announced by Dimitri Polyansky, a rising young member of the Communist party Presidium who also is chairman of the Council of Ministers of the Russian Federation. The Russian Federation is the sprawling republic that extends from Leningrad on the west to Vladivostok on the east.

He said a special group will coordinate the operation of farm machinery and se to it equipment is kept in good repair.

Baltimore Gerontology Research Center Urged

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two leaders of Maryland's delegation to the White House Conference on the Aging put in a plug for Baltimore Wednesday as the site for a proposed research center.

Sections of the conference discussing medical and biological aspects of aging research overwhelmingly approved a resolution asking that a federal center for gerontology studies be established. No site was mentioned.

That's when Mrs. Margaret C. Schweinhaut, chairman of Maryland's Commission on the Aging, and Dr. Matthew L. Tayback, vice chairman, urged that the center be located in Baltimore by expanding a present gerontology branch of City Hospitals.

The gerontology branch at the Baltimore hospital is now supported by the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md. Established 20 years ago, it has a staff of 68, including 30 research members trained in zoology, biochemistry, physiology, Biophysics, medicine, nutrition and psychology.

"City Hospitals is the only logical place to establish such a center unless we are to duplicate present facilities," said Dr. Tayback, assistant commissioner of the Baltimore City Health Department.

Mrs. Schweinhaut is a Democratic member of Maryland's House of Delegates from Montgomery County.

Belgian Strike Peace Conference Collapses

BRUSSELS (UPI) — A hastily convened peace conference of rival political parties to end Belgium's 23-day-old strike broke up in disagreement Wednesday night minutes after it started.

Leftist Socialist trade union leader Andre Renard, speaking to a rally of 15,000 strikers in Mons, immediately threatened a "new, more violent phase" of the strike aimed at overthrowing the government.

The failure of the peace conference to work out a suitable basis for a compromise threatened any conciliation attempts to end the Socialist walkout now costing Belgium $10 million a day.

De Gaulle Says People Back "Peace, Reason"

PARIS (AP)—President Charles de Gaulle said Wednesday the French people had backed the policy of "peace and reason" for dealing with the Algerian problem.

The decision in Sunday's vote—providing for local autonomy and later political self-determination in Algeria—would, he promised, be applied "without reserve in the spirit as in the letter."

FDR Jr. Pays Twice

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP)—School district officials said Wednesday they are returning to Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. a $1,232 check he sent to pay the school tax on his 300-acre Dutchess County farm.

Records showed he had paid the tax earlier.

Yemen's Ruler Bomb Target

LONDON (AP)—Intrigue swirls around King Ahmed in his lonely capital in Yemen and he has been the target of several bombing attacks, Allied diplomats said Wednesday night.

Alternately blamed are Yemeni refugees from his iron, medieval rule, or agents of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, who covets Yemen as well as the rest of the Arabian Peninsula.

The 68-year-old king thereupon ordered the arrest of several Yemeni officials, including the chief of police, saying they had fallen down on their jobs.

A group of Yemenis who had been campaigning for political and social reform then fled to Aden, the neighboring British colony. Several asked for and got political asylum.

But resistance to Ahmed's steely rule did not subside. Since August about a dozen bomb explosions have been reported.

10 Arrested In Marihuana Case Indicted

BALTIMORE (AP) — Federal grand jury indictments were returned Wednesday against 10 Negroes arrested last September when agents seized 500 pounds of marihuana on the Eastern Shore.

The indictments charged the drug, valued at $50,000, was grown on a Somerset County farm and some of it taken to New York for sale after harvesting.

An agent of the State Alcohol Tax Enforcement Unit touched off the arrests when he discovered some of the marihuana in bags in a panel truck near Salisbury Sept. 28.

Eight persons were named in a six - count indictment charging conspiracy to violate the federal marihuana law, unlawfully acquiring and transporting the drug, and aiding and abetting. Those named were:

The indictments said the drug was grown on a farm operated by John Woolford.

According to reports carriers filed with the AAR's Bureau of Railway Economics, net income for the first 11 months of 1960 was estimated at $393 million, compared with $484 million in 1959 and $514 million in 1958.

Circuit Court Rules Potomac Compact Valid

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Potomac River Compact of 1958 between Maryland and Virginia was upheld Wednesday in Baltimore Circuit Court.

Judge Anselm Sodaro ruled the compact for governing fisheries on the Potomac River to be valid and constitutional, saying it was legally adopted by Maryland voters in the November general election.

Judge Sodaro made the ruling in dismissing a suit in which 101 Southern Maryland watermen attacked the compact. Hyman A. Pressman of Baltimore was attorney for the watermen.

Pressman had contended compact provisions were not properly advertised in newspapers prior to the statewide referendum held in November. He also contended the compact was unconstitutional because it gave away Maryland's rights in the Maryland-owned river.

Judge Sodaro filed with his 37-page opinion a detailed synopsis of articles which appeared in county newspapers throughout the state, to show the extent of county publicity concerning the compact and the referendum.

Pressman's main attack was based on a law calling for the advertisement of such matters in Baltimore newspapers and at least two county papers. He claimed this requirement had not been complied with in the case of the compact.

Rees Trial Prosecutors Visit Death Scene Today

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two government attorneys who will be prosecutors at the Melvin Davis Rees Jr. murder trial will go to Virginia Thursday to see the place where two persons' bodies were found.

Asst. U. S. Atty. Robert E. Cahill said he and another assistant, H. Russell Smouse, would make the one-day trip with several FBI agents.

Rees, 31-year-old jazz musician from Hyattsville, Md., will be tried in U. S. District Court here Jan. 25 on federal charges of kidnaping and slaying Mrs. Mildred Jackson, 27, and her 5-year-old daughter, Susan. Their bodies were found near Gambrills, Md.

Rees is charged in Virginia with the kidnap-slaying of Mrs. Jackson's husband, Carroll, 29, and another daughter, Janet, 1½, whose bodies were found in Virginia.

Cahill, Smouse and the FBI agents first will meet with Dr. G. T. Mann, Virginia's chief medical examiner, in Richmond. Then they will inspect the Louisa County site where the family of four was abducted Jan. 11, 1959, and the abandoned sawmill site near Fredericksburg where Jackson and the younger daughter were found dead.

"I feel we have to do it," said Cahill. "There's no use talking about someplace you've never seen."

Cahill said the prosecution has submitted a list of 80 persons who may be called as witnesses to defense attorneys. He and Smouse agree the trial may last two weeks.

Defense attorneys are William J. Evans, former assistant U. S. attorney, and William J. O. Donnell, a former state's attorney for Baltimore City. Both were appointed by the court last July to represent Rees without fee.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

Diets Can Be Low-Fat, Never No-Fat

No matter how much you may want to give up being fat, you can't give up fats entirely. A minimum of one to three tablespoons a day is absolutely essential for lubrication and for regulation of the chemical balance within your system.

What's more, without enough Vitamin E, which is provided richly by unrefined vegetable oils as well as whole grains and wheat germ, the body cannot make use of Vitamin A, the "skin beauty" vitamin. So it is possible to be deficient in A, even while you consume quantities of green and yellow vegetables.

The result? Dry lifeless hair and a dry skin that infects easily, erupting in pimples and blackheads. This is a paradox, a real puzzler for dieters who expect their skin and hair to improve after a cut in high-calorie intake. They are right, they should expect improvement . . .but only by substituting or cutting down, never by cutting out the body's vital needs.

Are there women who put their skin and hair on a starvation diet without realizing it? There are more of them now than ever before. They've read a great deal lately about cholesterol in the blood, about the role fats may play in the breeding of heart disease. Many of them have become enlightened . . . but just as many have become confused.

They are usually the same women who diagnose their own diseases and decide on their own diets (usually freak diets of their own design) without consulting their doctors. Half out of fear, half from the misconception that they are doing themselves a favor, they figure that, if fats both contain calories and increase cholesterol, No fats are better than some.

Where are the two chief fallacies in their figuring? First, while all fats contain about the same amount of calories—250 per ounce, it is only the "saturated" animal fats (butter, cream, lard, fatty meats) and the "hydrogenated" or hardened vegetable and synthetic fats (shortening and oleomargarine) that appear to boost cholesterol level. The "unsaturated" fats—corn, cottonseed and soybean oils (with their wealth of Vitamin E)—are not only safe but even appear to reduce cholesterol content in the blood. They are ideal for replacing animal fats in strictly-controlled diets.

Second, not every person is considered a susceptible candidate for a heart attack. Risk heightens for the overweight, of course, as it does for anyone with a family history of heart disease or with high blood pressure, diabetes or kidney disease. Combine any two of these conditions in one person and the risk rises immediately.

Who, then, should be the judge, to classify a woman and her diet? So many factors can modify such a judgment; emotional temperament, occupation, sedentary habits, climate and environment—all must be weighed side by side with physical condition and history.

It's foolhardy for the layman alone to classify himself. For the doctor, it's impossible without the help, the honesty, the cooperation of his patient. Both must work together, to work out a diet program for maximum nutrition at minimum risk. Both fear and freak diets carry far more danger for a heavyweight than an extra dollop of butter on her toast.

So, my advice to you, if you intend to lose more than ten pounds, is to go straight to your doctor... and get the story, your story, straight. If you are up to par, with no pathological restrictions, he should approve heartily of the diet plan in my booklet, "Your Beauty Diet." For your copy, just mail ten cents and a stamped self-addressed envelope to me, JRP, c/o this newspaper . . . and allow two weeks for delivery.

High Speed 'Piggyback' Roller Roads Proposed

PITTSBURGH (UPI) —"Piggyback" roller roads to replace commuter railways and turnpikes as the newest concept of high-speed travel were proposed this week by two Westinghouse Electric Corp. engineers.

Charles Kerr, Pittsburgh, and Clarence Lynn of Westinghouse's Buffalo Division, said their road, if ever built, could carry passengers, commuters' automobiles and freight containers at speeds of up to 150 miles an hour.

A series of self-powered rubber rollers about 20 feet apart in separate lanes would make up a roadbed, according to their scheme. Flat - bottomed piggyback carriers would glide over these rollers at high speed with up to 10 cars, loaded with passengers, commuters' autos or freight.

There would be no power in the vehicles. The power would come from individual motors in the rollers controlled by programmed computers.

Commuters would just drive onto the dollies at each station and the car and dolly then would be loaded automatically on the train, as would freight.

Kerr and Lynn's plan showed that the dimensions of each piggyback carrier would allow accommodations for 10 commuters' cars and a cabin where riders could relax.

The two engineers said the motors in the road rollers would be idle except when a train is passing over them, therefore comparatively small motors could be employed. A train would pass over each roller in about five seconds.

Every roller in the road would contain a braking device and control would be completely automatic.

The main obstacle, according to Kerr and Lynn, is the building costs. However, they said the road could handle both freight and passenger traffic automatically at twice the speed of any transportation system yet proposed.

Objects at the North or South Pole weigh about one-half of 1 per cent more than at the Equator, owing to the lesser gravitational pull in the latter region.

Blizzard Hits Syria

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — A blizzard swept the mountainous regions of Syria Tuesday, bringing air and other communications to a standstill. A 30-inch blanket of snow was reported.

Shoveling 15 inches of snow from a sidewalk 50 feet long and five feet wide requires as much energy as lifting 1,950 pounds.

NEW YORK (AP)—Has a new bull market uptrend started?

But he expresses the belief the first upward move will probably top off sometime this month or early next month.

Ward says this should be followed by a testing and declining period during February and March.

He adds that although this would provide a more solid base structure for a still higher market later in the year, the action will continue to be very selective the balance of 1961.

"Many of the temporarily oversold issues of 1960 will be the market leaders of 1961," he declares.

"Leaders such as U. S. Steel, Standard Oil of California, International Paper and Anaconda are in the Dow Jones industrial average and, as a result, these industrials may not reach a new low during the period ahead as so many have been expecting.

"Is this a good time for new purchases? Yes, provided you choose stocks that have not already been temporarily over-exploited as to price."

The market as a whole, which has been in a narrow trading range for eight or nine weeks, shows signs of breaking out on the upside, in the opinion of L. O. Hooper of W. E. Hutton & Co.

He cites these reasons:

1. The cyclical stocks are cheaper and more liquidated than the glamor issues and the consumption industry shares.

2. The chances are that business will begin to get better sometime in the next 60 to 90 days and it is time to discount this.

3. Many people think the new administration will boldly do things to stimulate recovery soon after it takes office.

Labor Council Backs School Building Plan

The Western Maryland Central Labor Council Tuesday endorsed the proposed school building program of the Allegany County Board of Education.

A motion to support the program was adopted by the delegates of the 22 AFL-CIO affiliated unions. The labor group represents thousands of area union workers.

The labor organization has discussed the school building program at several recent meetings and officials said they felt the county needs such action to provide suitable facilities for the education of the youth of the county. Education is vital for the progress of the county and is one of the factors involved in attracting new industry, according to the labor leaders.

The program as advocated by the Board of Education calls for the construction of two junior high schools in Cumberland. The new schools would be for seventh and eighth grade students with high school pupils attending Allegany and Fort Hill.

The education group also proposes the erection of a six-room addition to Parkside School, a new elementary school in Frostburg, conversion of Beall Elementary to a junior high, building of three shops and other changes at Beall High, a six-room addition at Gephart School and the conversion of Carver School to a community college.

In earlier actions the program was endorsed by Local 244, International Typographical Union, and the Woman's Civic Club.

The Board of Allegany County Commissioners last month authorized the preparation of an enabling bill to be submitted to the General Assembly providing for the financing of the program. However, the commissioners have not endorsed the program and no amount of money was mentioned when the commissioners ordered the bill prepared.

Meeting Set On City Programs

City officials will be presented a detailed explanation of the municipal classification and pay scale programs at a meeting today at 7:30 p. m. in the office of Mayor J. Edwin Keech.

The explanation will be made by Milton B. Millon, director of the Municipal Technical Advisory Service of the University of Maryland, who prepared the programs that have been adopted by the city.

Attending the meeting will be members of the City Council and Civil Service Board, according to Mayor Keech, who said the meeting was arranged at the suggestion of department heads, who feel that there are some inequities in the programs.

Sentence Withheld In Armed Robbery

Associate Judge W. Earle Cobey today ordered Jerome Wesley Whitaker, 42, of Cresaptown, remanded to the county jail pending a report by James Lewis, state parole officer on the man's background.

Whitaker had entered a guilty plea to armed robbery January 3 of Warnick's Market on Bedford Road when his case was brought before Judge Cobey on criminal information provided by State's Attorney James S. Getty.

Edward J. Ryan was Whitaker's attorney and he asked the court for leniency and pointed out that it was the man's first offense.

A second man, Ernest Bennett, 36, of Centreville, was released yesterday in connection with the case. It was brought out during the hearing that Bennett had been with Whitaker but had been intoxicated and did not leave the car outside the market while the robbery took place.

Bennett was unaware of the robbery and saw only that Whitaker came out of the market with some groceries. He was unaware of the theft of $215 in cash during the robbery, according to testimony today. Bennett had been held as a material witness in the case.

Both men were reportedly together most of the day. Bennett gave himself up to State Police at Bedford. Whitaker was arrested after his car became stalled in a snow bank along a back road at Lake Koon.

Fire Routs Students

LEONARTOWN, Md. (AP) — A fire in an industrial arts classroom Tuesday routed several hundred students from the Bannaker Public School in nearby Loveville.

There were no injuries reported and firemen quickly extinguished the fire in the St. Mary's County school attended by more than 600 first through twelfth grade students. The entire student body had not reported at the time of the fire.

The balsa is the fastest growing tree.

Escapees Returned To Martinsburg

Three escapees, including a man being held on a murder charge, were recaptured Tuesday night and returned to the Berkeley County Jail in Martinsburg.

Martinsburg authorities said yesterday that the men were recaptured about 10 p. m. within the town limits of Martinsburg.

The three fled on foot from the jail and all law enforcement agencies in the community were notified and road blocks were set up on the town's limits.

Deputy Sheriff LeDane said he was overpowered by the trio as he was returning another prisoner, Bernard Barrett, to the cell block. Barrett refused to join in the escape.

Authorities said Norris is being held on a murder charge for the next session of the grand jury in Berkeley County. He allegedly stabbed another Negro man in a Martinsburg tavern on New Year's Eve.

Both Weatherholtz and Grove were being held in the jail as parole violators.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—The average phone conversation today takes twice as long as did 10 years ago, Rochester Telephone Co. reports. The jump is from three minutes to six minutes. The engineers have no answer as to why.

Tax Exemption Study Group Holds Meeting

The advisory committee named last month by the Allegany County Board of Commissioners to study the county 10-year tax exemption law met for the first time this week for a preliminary discussion of the program.

Leslie J. Clark, attorney to the county commissioners, outlined provisions of the 10-year tax exemption for new industry and the section which provides for an exemption for expansion of established industries.

John Stitely, supervisor of assessments for the county, said the county is exempting $14,200,000 of assessed property under provisions of the law. In a few years some of this assessed valuation will be placed on the tax books due to expiration of the 10-year exemption period. The largest amount, $12,000,000 will go back on the tax books in 1967.

The group discussed various phases of the tax exemption law and Clark said the county commissioners are mainly concerned with some recommendations of the expansion section of the tax exemption. The commissioners would like some clarification of this provision so they can have some clear yardstick to determine the eligibility of firms seeking exemptions due to expansion of their plants.

Others attending the meeting were Miller Bowen, Frostburg; F. Patrick Allender, Chester A. Fisher and Eugene P. Brown.

Three Youths Given Sentences

A Cumberland youth was sentenced to 30 days in the Allegany County Jail and two minors were ordered committed to the Maryland Training School for Boys during a hearing in Juvenile Court.

Magistrate Paul Barnett, who presided, ordered Joseph Glenn Lewis, 19, of 512 Marshall Street, committed to the County Jail for 30 days after finding him guilty of contributing to the delinquency of the two minors.

The minors were then sentenced to the training school.

The three were arrested early yesterday by City Officer Oliver Cook in connection with a stolen automobile case.

Court attaches noted that the one minor has had four offenses within the past three months, while the second juvenile was in court for the second time within three months.

December Police Report Made

There were 858 arrests made during December by the City Police Department, according to a report presented by Police and Fire Commissioner Philmore F. Fleming to the Mayor and Council.

The report also stated that there were $1,741.10 collected in fines last month.

The Fire Department answered 44 calls during December, with the report stating that only minor damage resulted from the fires.

Wild rice, long a favorite of gourmets, is not rice at all. It is actually a perennial grass indigenous to North America. Most of the annual crop is still hand-harvested by Indians in the lake-regions of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the Canadian provinces of Manitoba and Ontario.

Ann Landers . . .

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband is a swell dancer and he sure does know it. Whenever we are out on a party or with a crowd he asks me to dance and the minute he spots a better dancer on the floor he grabs her and throws me at her partner.

This has happened so many times it's beginning to irritate me beyond endurance. I've told him it's not only insulting to me but there is always the possibility that the girl he grabs may prefer the guy she's dancing with. He says I'm overly touchy and that no girl has ever complained.

I told him I was writing to you and he said you'll surely see the humor in the situation and tell me I'm wrong. Am I?

—NO EXPERT

DEAR NO: This is about as funny as a four-alarm fire in a home for the aged. Your husband's behavior is unspeakably rude and he must have a colossal ego to assume that EVERY woman he encounters would rather dance with him than anyone else.

Tell him if he pulls that stunt again you will walk off the floor and leave him to battle it out with the man whose partner he tried to snatch.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a fellow 19 and in love with a girl who is afraid of all men. Her father beats her and uses bad language. He also hits his wife and slaps the other kids.

I want to marry this girl and take her out of that terrible home but she says she doesn't trust me and that I will probably treat her like her father treats her mother.

I've always been kind to this girl and I've never hit a woman in my life. What can I do to get her to marry me? She is of legal age and could leave whenever she wants to.—IN LOVE.

Dear In Love: This girl's home situation has twisted her thinking and I don't think you can easily untwist it.

The normal reaction of a normal girl would be to leave a punishing situation at the earliest possible minute. Since she chooses to stay at home and get belted around I don't think you should try to talk her into marriage. Find a new girl.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is there anything wrong with an 18-year-old boy phoning a girl, 16, at four o'clock in the morning?

Our daughter has been going steady with Rick and they see each other every day, even if only for a minute. Rick works nights and our daughter is in high school.

We have a phone with a long cord in the upstairs hall. Our daughter often takes the phone into her room and closes the door. Then if she gets a call no one else in the house is disturbed.

This morning she was giggling about the fact that Rick had phoned her at 4 a.m. just for kicks. I thought it was rather cute but her father blew his top. Is there anything wrong with this?—NOT SURE

DEAR NOT: There's a time and place for everything. Four o'clock in the morning is not the time for a social call. It may not be "wrong" but it adds up to pretty poor judgment.

Does almost everyone have a good time but you? If so, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Well-Liked," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Resurfacing Projects Set If City Funds Available

Depending on the availability of money for the projects, the Street Department plans to have 15 street resurfacing jobs ready to go this year and has already begun action on ordinances.

The list of 15 streets is a priority group prepared by the Engineering Department, according to Street Commissioner John J. Long. No one street has been set up at the present time as being top on the list.

Notices of hearings on three ordinances January 23 were approved yesterday by the Mayor and Council. They are Washington Street from Kiefer Avenue to Fayette Street; Allegany Street from Fayette to Cumberland Street; and East Elder Street from Virginia Avenue to the C&O Canal.

In submitting a few ordinances to council each week for hearings, Long said yesterday he was getting ready for starting resurfacing in the spring depending on whether money is available.

Two of the 15, City Hall Square brick section and the Central YMCA intersection were submitted to bids last year but council delayed action. Others listed for possible action in 1961 are:

In addition, and as last year, there are plans for light-surface treatment of some streets, alley paving and the paving of new streets during the year ahead.

4-H Youths To Attend Meet

Five members of the Allegany County 4-H Older Youth Club will attend a state conference today at Lord Baltimore Hotel in Baltimore, according to Mrs. Edith Belcher, assistant county home demonstration agent.

They are Sally and Lois Miller, Midland; Shirley Wiegand, Janice White, Valley Road; and Edward Ott, Ridgeley. The delegates to the conference will attend a session during the morning at which various phases of 4-H work will be outlined and in the afternoon a tour of industries and businesses in Baltimore.

Two Injured In Car Crash

Two Frostburg women were hospitalized yesterday following a one-car accident in Midland.

Admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital were Mrs. E. C. Bauman and her sister, Miss Veronica Sleeman who reside at 115 Mt. Pleasant Street, Frostburg. Mrs. Bauman sustained lacerations of her face and lip, while Miss Sleeman suffered a possible head injury. Both were reported as "good" yesterday.

The accident occurred as Rev. John Sleeman, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Midland, and a brother of the injured women, was traveling northbound on the highway, lost control and struck a utility pole. Father Sleeman was not injured.

Judge Cobey Visits Brother

Associate Judge W. Earle Cobey of Allegany County Circuit Court left yesterday for Washington where he will meet his brother, State Senator James A. Cobey of Merced, Calif.

Senator Cobey is attending the White House Conference on Problems of the Aging as a member of the California delegation.

Tax Collector Makes Report

A breakdown of the report reveals general collections totaled $88,134.89; water fees, $47,685.05; paving liens, $3,119.98, and sewer liens, $110.

Mrs. Lucile Roeder, city finance commissioner, also presented a report to the Mayor and Council that listed a balance of $137,659.39 in the general account as of the end of the year.

Other balances as of January 1 included $98,304.88, water operative account; $46,824.90, general improvement bond account; $34.72, paving bonds; $631.49, flood account, and $2,297.63, 1931 sewer bonds.

Getty Attends State Meeting

James S. Getty, state's attorney for Allegany County, attended a conference Saturday in Rockville being held by the State's Attorney's Association of Maryland.

The purpose of the conference was to review and recommend changes to the proposed Maryland Code to members of the General Assembly.

Getty discussed non-support, sentencing, restitution and probation, search warrants and the revision of the department of correction.

Lightning strikes the earth about 100 times a second.

Regimentation Vs. Incentives

Chinese Communists have been having trouble with agriculture. It is not surprising that their incredible boasts of what they were going to accomplish in increased output in 1960 were unfulfilled. But they are forced to admit that serious disaster has struck their farm program.

For public consumption they blame the worst series of natural calamities in a century—drought, floods, typhoons, hail, frost, locusts and plant diseases—which virtually took 64 million acres of arable land out of production and seriously reduced the output on 84 million additional acres.

Russia has been having similar troubles. Here the failure is blamed on Vlademir Matskevich, who was in charge of the program, and he will be demoted to a minor post to reflect on where he went wrong in applying the infallible dogmas of Marx.

Both China and Russia have tried to step up agricultural production by regimenting peasants instead of by giving them incentives to produce more. In China, as in Russia, officials are punished for failure of policies they had no choice but to follow.

Though America's farm program is excessively costly because of the huge surpluses it produces, the incentive system it uses has at least accomplished something which Communist regimentation hasn't: It has brought high production. During World War II Americans didn't find it necessary to worry about getting enough to eat. Like the Sorcerer's Apprentice, Washington cannot find a magic word to stop the flow.

Too much is better than too little. Incentives are better than regimentation. Communism hasn't solved the problem of agriculture. Most of the nations of the world would be happy if their only problem in agriculture were overproduction.

These Days

Republican Organization

When Senator Jacob Javits attempted to lessen the influence of Senator Barry Goldwater in the process of reorganizing the Republican Party after the campaign, Goldwater came out on top because the Republican Party is conservative. Goldwater's position is not dubious; he makes himself clear on all public questions. Like most conservatives, he is pugnacious.

In an address to the Republican National Committee, Goldwater spoke not so much of the Republican defeat, but of the astonishing victories in this campaign. As one looks at these victories, which gained the Republicans two seats in the Senate and 21 seats in the House, Senator Goldwater listed these facts:

"Topping the list is the charming lady from Maine, Margaret Chase Smith, whose constituents returned her to office by a whopping 61.6 per cent. Next is the stalwart Senator from New Hampshire, Styles Bridges, who received 60.3 per cent. Senator John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky took third place honors with 59.2 per cent, narrowly topping the performance of Nebraska's Carl Curtis who won with 58.5 per cent of the votes cast.

"Next in line come three men who did equally well, with 56.3 per cent records. They were Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, Senator Clifford Case of New Jersey, and the late Keith Thomson of Wyoming, whose tragic, untimely death shortly after the election constitutes the one sad note in this report."

Unfortunately, these figures do not provide a pattern for the Republican Party. Whereas Styles Bridges and Karl Mundt might be called conservatives, Margaret Chase Smith and Clifford Case might be regarded as liberals, and Senators Cooper and Saltonstall as middle-of-the-roaders.

Thus, out of these statistics one cannot reach a conclusion, certainly not the conclusion that the Republican Party is prepared to follow the conservatism of Senator Barry Goldwater. On the other hand, the fact that the Senate Republican conference elected Senator Goldwater Chairman of the Senate Campaign Committee, which makes him one of the three top leaders of his party, the other two being Richard Nixon and Thruston Morton—this fact is not to be ignored.

Goldwater did not ignore it. He said:

". . . I do believe that there is danger in constant shifting of party position. I believe we should be consistent; that we should take a position and stand on it, fighting for what we believe and know to be the right and best course for the American people."

The Eisenhower Administration was really without party conception. During its first term, President Eisenhower deliberately sought to put himself above party — to be a head of state rather than a chief executive. He organized the White House on that basis with Sherman Adams as major domo. It did not work because it was alien to the American concept of the Presidency. Our President is a political party leader who is expected to help build his party in Congress, so that he gets proper support and not to have to depend on the opposition party as Eisenhower depended upon Lyndon Johnson.

President Kennedy, while he is appointing some Republicans and some no-party men to office, is a Democrat and will operate as a Democrat. Although the Democrats are in power, they have weak spots, particularly in the South and in New York State. In New York, the Democrats are dependent upon the Liberal Party. It was a close call because the Liberal Party is as likely as not to throw its strength to either party, being bound to neither.

Professional Democrats in New York are, on the whole, antagonistic to the Liberal Party and to the Reformers, led by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. The stronger leadership of the party in New York City, led by Representative Charles Buckley, will have nothing to do with them. Carmine DeSapio is not in as strong a position to resist them, but he is antagonistic to them. Unless this Democratic cleavage is healed before 1962, the Republicans feel that they have a chance in this metropolitan area. But the leadership of Governor Nelson Rockefeller is insufficient to hold the Republicans together.

This much is clear about the Republican Party in the year of an unexpected defeat. All the professionals admit that the Presidential campaign was badly managed; that the Party actually in some places shows real vigor. But there seems to be common agreement that competition with Kennedy as to who is most liberal will do no good.

Will Bob Kennedy Be Good Attorney General?

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON—Of all the Cabinet appointments, the one that the Senate will soon debate and examine most carefully before giving its "advice and consent" will be that of Robert F. Kennedy, the nominee for Attorney General.

Aged 35 and with no record in courtroom practice of law, the younger Kennedy receives the appointment partly as a political reward and partly as the trusted lieutenant of his brother, the President-elect.

What kind of Attorney General will he turn out to be? For one thing, he will make a much better record if he gives up politics than if he continues to participate in political activity.

The Department of Justice is basically a non-political department of the government. Though occasionally there have been criticisms alleging political bias when certain prosecutions were carried on, the department during most administrations has managed to steer clear of politics.

Does the public realize what an attorney general has to do and how important it is for the American people, especially the legal profession, to have confidence in the Department of Justice? Here are several points to be borne in mind.

1. As top man in the enforcement of federal laws, the Attorney General is the chief legal adviser to the President and a member of his Cabinet, in which he ranks fourth.

2. The Attorney General furnishes advice and opinion on legal questions to the President and also to the other Cabinet officers when so requested.

3. The Attorney General construes the laws under which the executive departments act and furnishes legal counsel in all federal cases.

4. The Attorney General directs all suits before the Supreme Court of the United States in which the federal government is concerned. He may appear before the Supreme Court to argue a case of great importance, though this usually is left to the Solicitor General.

5. The Attorney General and his staff review all executive orders and draft legislation desired by the President.

6. The Attorney General appears before Congressional committees to testify on proposed legislation concerned with law enforcement and the judiciary.

7. The Attorney General selects for recommendation to the President the nominees for federal judgeships and also the 91 U. S. attorneys and 600 assistant attorneys throughout the country who are the chief prosecuting officers for the federal government in each judicial district. Congress is being asked by the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee to create 63 new federal judgeships.

8. The Attorney General is responsible for the enforcement of all federal laws involving crime, including those relating to kidnapping, bribery, counterfeiting, narcotics, extortion, perjury, and subversive activities and espionage.

9. The Attorney General enforces the antitrust laws, conducting both civil and criminal suits.

10. The Attorney General has complete control of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and may order or discontinue its investigations.

11. The Attorney General is responsible for enforcement of the internal revenue laws in all manner of tax cases.

12. The Attorney General directs all civil-rights cases involving the federal government, including, of course, all school desegregation orders of the courts.

13. The Attorney General must enforce the labor-racketeering laws, including cases that involve misuse of union funds or extortion of money from employers.

All in all, it's a formidable list. Mr. Kennedy could, to be sure, change the nature of the job of the Attorney General. He could make it more of a general managership of a big department and depend on assistants with more experience than he has had in the practice of law to do the legal work of the department.

Young Kennedy is a tireless worker and is reported to be a skillful administrator. He could make a creditable record as the head of the Department of Justice, despite his lack of experience as a trial lawyer. But will he be judged on the basis of his work in his own department, or will attention center on what he does in the field of politics in behalf of his brother's administration?

For there are countless things a Cabinet officer can do right along to advance the political fortunes of his chief, especially if the latter is likely to be up for re-election four years later. So far as the American people are concerned, it seems clear that they do not wish to see politics influencing the judgment of an Attorney General any more than they would care to see it affecting the decisions of the Secretary of State or the Secretary of Defense.

If Robert Kennedy abandons all political activities and concentrates on running the Department of Justice impartially, and if he efficiently administers this big department — which has about 31,000 employes—he will be regarded as a good Attorney General by the public. But it probably will always be hard to convince the members of the American Bar Association that a President need not appoint a top-notch lawyer to be the Attorney General of the United States.

Inside Washington

By Henry Cathcart

MANPOWER PROBLEM — Reports persist that President-elect John F. Kennedy is having trouble getting the men he wants for his administration, particularly at the second and third levels of the executive scale.

Kennedy's recruiters seem to be running into difficulties. One deals with the fact that most business executives are Republican and do not want to interrupt their careers to help a Democratic administration.

The other deals with government pay scales, which in the executive brackets are notoriously low in comparison to private industry. Many bright young men would want to come to work for the government, but, having no estate of their own built up, feel it would be an injustice to their families and themselves to stop their careers during their most productive years in order to work for the government.

A third factor has crept into the picture. This concerns "leaked" stories that President Eisenhower was unhappy about a Republican in his administration who accepted a cabinet post under Kennedy.

This attitude has caused more than one youthful administrator in industry to think twice about the attitude of his Republican boss before asking for a leave of absence to go into government work.

Kennedy's recruiters are working through a mountain of applications for the many administrative jobs they must fill, but they don't want political hangers-on, or some politician's friend. And that's what most of the applicants are.

They're 'Respiratory Infections,' Not 'Colds'

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Thirty years ago scientists were doing their best to find the organism responsible for the common cold. It turned out to be a virus. Since that time, dozens of distinct viruses have been isolated from men and women with upper respiratory infections.

It is obvious that we use the term—a cold—all too loosely. The reason why so many viruses were found is that there are so many different respiratory infections with symptoms resembling the common cold.

Most of us complain of having a cold or the flu whenever we develop nasal congestion, sore throat, aching, and unusual fatigue. Variations occur in that the sore throat may be associated with a tickle in the throat, hoarseness, or a deep productive cough.

Symptoms have little to do with the causative agent. They depend upon where the organisms settle and vary from the sniffles when the nose is involved to an old hound dog bark when the trachea is invaded.

All are "colds" to the laity but respiratory infection is a better term. Furthermore, the same virus may be responsible, explaining why one child in the family develops a respiratory infection that is nosy; another, throaty; a third, chesty.

Special laboratory studies would be needed to determine whether the virus that is pestering the neighborhood is influenza A or B, an adenovirus, ECHO virus, Coxsackie, or one of the lesser known varieties. After an epidemic gets going, the culprit usually is determined by the local health department, medical school, or laboratory. Some medico is curious enough to make the tests.

MEDICINE

D. R. writes: I have been taking an antihistaminic product for allergic rhinitis, which helps. Will using such medicine for a long time have a bad effect on the blood or the body?

REPLY

No. Many persons have taken these drugs for years without developing unpleasant or serious side effects. Those who develop reactions switch to another brand of antihistaminic or stop their use entirely.

FLU VACCINE

Mrs. A. G. writes: Is vaccination against Asiatic flu availbale?

REPLY

Yes. Most flu vaccines contain prophylaxis against the usual types A and B, along with protection against the Asian strain.

RINGWORM

L. W. writes: Can athlete's foot spread to the inside of the body through the blood stream?

REPLY

No, but other infections may develop in the cracks and crevices of the foot that can reach the blood stream. Occasionally the body becomes sensitized to the fungi on the feet and produces an "id" or allergic reaction on the hands.

MOONFACED

L. P. writes: What can be done for a large face due to taking cortisone?

REPLY

If you must have a steroid, switching to another type may help the situation. As a rule, puffiness of the tissues goes away when cortisone is stopped.

MYOPIA

Mrs. J. L. writes: Is nearsightedness due to low metabolism?

REPLY

No. It is hereditary. The individual is born with eyeballs that are too long.

MUMPS AND FERTILITY

F. A. K. writes: Can a man's fertility be tested after an attack of mumps?

REPLY

Yes, but there is no need unless complications occurred during the attack of mumps.

SKULL ENLARGEMENT

H. J. writes: Does Paget's disease of the bone cause the head to get bigger?

REPLY

Yes, in many instances. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this disease, also known as osteitis deformans.

To the limit of space questions pertinent to the prevention of disease will be answered. Personal replies will be made when return stamped envelope is enclosed. Telephone inquiries not accepted. Dr. Van Dellen will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

Try And Stop Me

By Bennett Cerf

Former President Harry Truman likes to tell of the day, a year or so after he left the White House, that he went calling on a friend in New York and inadvertently rang the wrong door bell. The man who answered accepted his apology graciously enough, then did a double take, and exclaimed, "Say, did anybody ever tell you that you're the spitting image of that old blankety blank Harry Truman?"

A Carthage, Tex., candidate for constable distributed campaign circulars listing his qualifications in this comparatively modest fashion: "Vote for Turk Chamness—the bank robber catchin'est constable in the U.S.A. and the fightin'est, pound for pound, wet or dry. (Present weight: 105 pounds)."

They had to fire a fine old lighthouse keeper the other day. He kept dousing the light to watch TV.

U.S. Allies Flabbergasted By Ike's Eleventh-Hour Vigorous Action

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON — American allies have been flabbergasted, to put it mildly, at the spectacle of outgoing President Eisenhower starting policies in Laos and Cuba during the last few days in office which he could not possibly follow up.

In Laos, Ike appeared willing to take the United States up to the brink of a jungle war thousands of miles away, which no American military leader wanted to fight, and which the President who succeeds him certainly would hesitate to continue.

In Cuba, the retiring President broke relations with a country whose people have been our friends for over 60 years, yet continued relations with the same Communist countries which were supplying arms to Cuba. He did this despite the quite recent advice of his Secretary of State that the U. S. Embassy in Havana must, at all costs, be kept open.

This sudden activity by a President who spent more than three years out of his eight in office either ill or on vacation has not only mystified our allies, but has made them wonder whether Eisenhower was deliberately trying to make things difficult for Kennedy. Was he trying to hand Kennedy Eisenhower-made policies which Kennedy would have to carry out? This was asked quite seriously among the diplomats of Western Europe.

Behind Ike's Moves

The answer is threefold:

1. Ike was burned up at Kennedy's campaign insinuations that he was a do-nothing President and had let the USA deteriorate to the rank of second-class power. To show the opposite, Ike has been determined to leave office a strong, hard-hitting President.

2. Allen Dulles had warned the President last fall that the Communist bloc might take advantage of the vacuum between the election November 8 and the Inauguration January 20 to try to catch the United States off balance. So he, Ike, has been determined to demonstrate that he's firmly in the saddle, has a tight grip on the reins.

3. Adm. Harry Felt, U.S. commander in the Pacific, sent the White House an alarming report claiming that the Communists had invaded Laos and that it could turn into another Korea. This got Ike all steamed up, caused him to alert the 7th Fleet.

In the end, Admiral Felt's alarm appeared unjustified. Only two Communist soldiers—no troops—were found in Laos. There was a Russian arms drop, but it was insignificant compared with our own. So our British and French allies flatly refused to go along with any scare moves in Southeast Asia until Kennedy took office.

In Latin America, some governments had been veering toward a break with Fidel Castro, but Ike's sudden rupture now makes that difficult. For it's extremely unpopular for any Latin Nation to appear to be following the advice and leadership of military-minded Uncle Sam.

And when Ike sent the giant airplane carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt to Guantanamo he made it all the more difficult for even our best friends to follow our lead in breaking relations. There is nothing that boils the Latins more than the spectre of U.S. might hovering over a little Latin nation.

Note—Our Allies now figure they have the President of the United States in a calmer mood. But they're still mystified as to why after so many quiet years of putting on safe greens, Ike suddenly began swinging wild into the dangerous rough of foreign affairs.

Words, Not Deeds

One proposal for getting rid of farm surpluses, pounded for years by the National Farmers Union, has been "food for peace." So it was natural that when the Inaugural Committee conceived the idea of a float featuring "food and Peace" they should turn to Minesota, breadbasket of the West, and Bill Thatcher, head of the Farmers Union grain terminal in the twin cities.

Mr. Thatcher collects around $3,500,000 yearly from Uncle Sam and the American taxpayers for storing surplus grain. Out of this, Thatcher spends about $2,000,000 a year for propaganda for higher price supports which have the effect of increasing farm production and, in turn, the farm surplus which he stores. Among other things he signed up two years ago for a 3-year TV "educational" program on a 14-station network.

So the Inaugural Committee suggested that Mr. Thatcher might spare a mere $2,000 to build a "food for peace" float which would illustrate one way of getting rid of the food surplus which Mr. Thatcher helps to store. They thought this would also be educational.

Mr. Thatcher, however, said no.

NOTE—The American eagle, standing on a globe representing the world, and holding a giant market basket in its beak, with farmers filling the basket, will still be in the parade, however. The John Deere Farm Implement Company generously offered to pay for the Food For Peace float.

Merry-Go-Round

One of Kennedy's few public relations boo-boos: When he was quoted as not liking to be called "Jack." . . . Lincoln was called "Abe," the first Roosevelt was called "Teddy," Churchill is called "Winnie," de Gaulle is called "Le Grand Charlie," Field Marshal Joffre was called "Papa," Adenauer is called "Der Alte," and Eisenhower is called "Ike." It's a first principle of politics that as long as folks call you by a familiar name, you're OK. Suppose the American people start calling Jack "Mr. K" of the USA . . . Congressman John Dingell, the Detroit Democrat and a crusading conservationist, is urging the reappointment of Ross Leffler, Ike's Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Fish and Wildlife. Leffler has done a fine job.

Kennedy's Policy

By Leslie Gould

The $64 economic question today is the policy — singular or plural—the new Kennedy Administration will follow.

The reason there is this question is the conflict of the free spending and taxing program outlined in the Democratic platform with some of the conservative appointments Mr. Kennedy has made to his Cabinet.

As the date for the change at Washington approaches, some clues to this policy are appearing. These are in the reports to Mr. Kennedy by study groups named by him.

The first of these was the report of James M. Landis, calling for new leadership in the alphabetical agencies. This report was highly critical of the procedures in some of the agencies that are hampering business.

Now, a second report—this one economic — recommends a program to meet what is admitted as a business "recession" more widespread than a "rolling readjustment."

This report is made to Mr. Kennedy by an MIT professor of economics—Dr. Paul A. Samuelson. There is some flavor of the thinking of Harvard Professor J. Kenneth Galbraith, who back in 1955 was seeing 1929 as being repeated.

Dr. Samuelson, though, doesn't believe that the current recession can be termed a depression. He is rather pessimistic, which probably is "good politics" at this time—so that if a recovery develops later this year the new regime can take the bows.

According to Dr. Samuelson, "1959 and 1960 have been grievously disappointing years." But he skips over the fact that even the last year—when business slid off—the economy for the first time on record passed the half trillion mark.

Also skipped over is the fact that the United States up to 1960 had been enjoying its greatest boom in history—in spite of the pessimism of the "eggheads" like Prof. Galbraith in the early days of that boom.

That is water over the dam—as to who was right or wrong these last 10 years of boom. The important thing is to restore confidence and bring about a turn in the business tide.

This is the responsibility of the new administration and how it meets this will set the stage for business as well as prepare the ground for the next presidential election—only a short four years away.

Interestingly, Dr. Samuelson does not favor a return to exceptionally easy money — the major weapon against recessions prewar and in recent years. However, inflation does not particularly worry him.

He does favor some step up in spending, but with an eye on the international balance of payments position of the U. S.

Expansion of unemployment compensation benefits, with emergency legislation to permit all states to continue paying unemployment benefits—even at a stepped up rate—for at least 39 weeks, regardless of the condition of their insurance reserves.

Defense spending geared to needs rather than the immediate health of the economy.

Foreign aid should continue, based on the needs rather than the particular ability of the U. S. to pay at the moment.

Urban renewal and slum clearance should be pressed.

Mortgage rates be brought down to 4½ per cent to encourage housing, although the report is doubtful about a housing pick up this year.

Accelerate highway construction programs.

Only limited use now of Federal Reserve powers to increase the supply of money and ease credit, because of the international payments crisis.

Treasury should go slow in switching from short term debt into long term, also because of the international payments situation.

A temporary tax cut, of 3 or 4 percentage points in the tax rate applicable to every income class, effective in March or April on withholding and continued to the year end. The report asks that the executive be given the power to continue such reductions for one or two six months (or three months) periods beyond that time.

A new approach — not spelled out—to the wage-price spiral, but the implication is that Government should use its influence on holding down prices.

Basically, it is still a spend and spend program, restrained only by the critical international balance of payments situation.

Laundries Biggest Service Industry

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — Professional laundries have become the nation's largest personal service industry, with an annual sales volume of more than $1.6 billion, the American Laundry Institute said.

The institute said the industry processed more than 5 billion pounds of laundry a week — including a weekly average of more than 50 million men's shirts.

In sprucing up the nation the industry yearly uses 150 million pounds of soap, 37 million pounds of starch and 950 million collar supports.

Woman To Woman

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — If hubby has a den, put something orange or tangerine in it.

It's sure to make him feel like an executive. Self-satisfied, that is. Color psychologist claim the orange and tangerine shades have such an effect.

Rose Padgett, of Purdue University's department of clothing and textiles, is the expert claiming that every executive - looking nook or suite "must" now have that magic touch of orange or tangerine.

Miss Padgett cited the "must" for executive suites in a report in the current issue of "College and University Business," a professional journal.

But more than the gift of the orange or tangerine's needed in the fashion - minded executive's pad—at home or in the office.

"Other colors are American beauty pink, rosy reds to coral, carnation pink, cerise and light or dark red," Miss Padgett said.

"A touch of white, black or charcoal seems pertinent. When these colors are combined they affect one another in powerful ways. In general, the bright colors predominate, giving a striking effect."

Furniture fabrics, for the home or office, lean toward opulence, Miss Padgett reported in her review of the latest color and texture trends in upholstery and slipcover materials.

She said the opulence is achieved through the use of distinctive colorful fabrics, newly textured in a variety of ways and yet appropriate for their selected needs.

"Gone are the days when the faithful four—brown, blue, black and white—dominated the scene," she said.

"The textured fabric look is much in vogue. Texture is achieved in a variety of ways to give the flat or the three-dimensional look.

Miss Padgett said the furniture fabrics fall into the following four patterns:

—Loomed fabrics with emphasis on woven design in the jacquard weave, the diamond pattern, the basic twill, satin and plain weaves.

—The luxury newcomer, wool suede, a 100 per cent non-woven wool fabric with a soft to the hand and rich luster. The wool is moth-proofed and treated with a silicone finish to repel moisture, oil and air-borne dirt.

—Dynamic vinyl coated knit backed fabrics in embossed and printed designs simulating the textures and appearance of the prestige of leather and woven fabrications.

Closed Conference

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Government sources said Wednesday that sessions of the Jan. 15 conference of oil exporting nations will be held behind closed doors "in the most complete secrecy."

Foreign observers, newspapermen and spectators will not be permitted to attend any of the sessions, it was reported. Only those delegates from nations affiliated with the oil exporters organization will be permitted to attend.

Delegations of from four to five persons each from Venezuela, Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq and Kuwait are to attend the conference.

Mines Still Present

TOKYO (UPI)—A Japanese defense agency reported Wednesday that 1,200 mines laid by United States ships in World War II still are undestroyed around Japan's coastal waters.

adding to the confusion. They were immediately replaced. Smoke ejectors were used by the firemen, who donned gas masks to enter the burning building.

They also used a power saw and an axe to get into the partition on the second floor front of the building. Flames were visible on two separate occasions near the roof of the front porch and were quickly knocked down by the firefighters.

During the height of the fire fighting operations, Lt. McDonald, who was inside the building, made his way to the front porch before he was overcome by the smoke.

He was quickly assisted to the street where he was given fresh oxygen from a pneolator manned by the firemen. A local mail carrier and nurse who were on the scene gave assistance.

Minutes after being revived, he was placed in the department's emergency truck and driven to the local hospital where he was kept overnight for observation.

Apartments Damaged

Damaged by the blaze and water was the two-room apartment in the basement, which also includes a storage room and furnace room.

Two apartments are located on the second floor. One is occupied by Miss Catherine Coleman and the other by Mr. and Mrs. Loring Parker.

Heavy fire and water damage was caused to the front section of Miss Coleman's apartment, although most of the apartment of the Parker's, with the exception of the front room, was not damaged as much.

The third-floor apartment, the least damaged, is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James Gormer and son.

Directing fire - fighting operations were Chief Virgil A. Parker and Assistant Chiefs Robert C. Long and Vincent Wegman. City police handled traffic on Washington Street.

The home was formerly owned by the late U. S. Senator George Wellington, who was elected to that office in 1894 and served for six years.

als, now before the General Assembly, call for $2,687,072 for teachers' salaries, $671,769 in non-salary state aid, and $3,255,843 for school construction.

How Teachers Would Fare

The James Committee program would raise teachers' salaries from the state minimum of $3,200-$5,300 to $3,600-$5,700. Increases would vary from $1 in Baltimore County to $331 in Charles County, based on county averages. The average increase in Allegany County would be $204.

The MCTP - MSTA program would raise the state minimum to $4,000-$6,000. Average salary increases would range from $330 in Baltimore City to $653 in St. Mary's County. In Allegany County, the average salary increase would be $509.

Mrs. Bull and Mr. Hendrickson said the two organizations now are distributing 125,000 copies of a booklet contrasting the two programs.

They said the joint program would cost about $6,150,000, or $2 per capita, more than the James Committee proposals. Both said there's plenty of money available in the current state surplus, particularly since the teachers' retirement system will show a saving of $3,588,000 in the next budget.

If the surplus is used for some purpose other than education, the PTAs would support "any equitable tax measure required to provide the additional $6,150,000" for the MCPT-MSTA program, said Mrs. Bull.

But she emphasized that the state PTAs have not asked for tax measures whose revenues would be earmarked specifically for education, on the theory that fluctuation of revenues in different economic situations might not serve the best interests of the educational program.

Survey Shows Need For W. Va. Re-Assessment

Counties Losing Much Tax Revenue

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The Legislature was told Wednesday that West Virginia counties could raise an additional $16 million in property taxes by hiking assessments to the level of appraisals shown in a Tax Commission survey.

Tax Commissioner Don C. Carman told the lawmakers that property is assessed for tax purposes at an average of 53.07 per cent of the actual value shown in the spot-check survey.

The survey also showed that counties are raising only 52.59 per cent of the amount available if nearly - maximum rates set out in 1960 law were applied to actual values.

Carman said the survey showed assessed values in all counties totaled $2,991,124,769 which provided $17,691,000 in taxes. The statewide appraised value shown by the survey was $5,646,777,080 which would net $33.7 million in taxes.

The 1960 state aid law provides that if a county is raising less than 47.5 per cent of its "local share" under the state school aid formula, the school board may take part of the county court's levies to make up the difference. Until that law was passed, a county lost a percentage of its state aid equal to the number of percentage points which its assessments fell below appraised figures.

Key figures in the report to the Legislature were the percentage of assessed to appraised tax totals, showing whether a county was raising the required percentage of taxes locally. Those percentages ranged from 34.67 in Berkeley County to 76.73 in Wyoming County.

Four other counties exceeded 60 per cent. They were Boone, 67.88; Logan 63.17; Cabell 62.66 and Marion 60.17.

In the 20 counties below 50 per cent, assessors are given the opportunity to raise the percentage before school aid is doled out next year. Changes in county court tax rates are not made until July and August.

Brooke, 49.79, Gilmer 47.25, Hampshire 46.42, Hancock 44.11, Lewis 40.36, Mason 41.99, Monongalia 42.92, Pleasants 46.28, Preston 48.82, Tucker 49.86, and Wood 40.18.

Percentages for the other counties included:

Barbour 51.37, Braxton 53.79, Calhoun 55.57, Doddridge 56.12, Grant 56.50, Hardy 56.99, Harrison 54.59, Jackson 53.97, Kanawha 51.38, Marshall 50.74, Mineral 52.45, Ohio 55.67, Pendleton 55.08, Randolph 52.81, Ritchie 51.21, Roane 52.80, Taylor 58.01, Tyler 55.65, Upshur 50.78, Wetzel 57.58, and Wirt 55.84.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Louella Parsons

HOLLYWOOD—Could be if Jack Benny accepts Robert Lippert's offer to be "the voice of the Mamma Bear" in "The Teddy Bears"—I'll wind up in dutch with the Hollywood agents. Innocently, I got into this deal when Lippert told me how much he wanted Jack for the charming Disney-like fantasy which he is producing in color with a special musical score for 20th Century-Fox.

By happenstance, I reached Jack before Lippert did. After a brief moment in which Jackson must have thought I'd taken leave of my senses talking about a "mamma bear," he got the point. When I explained, Jack said: "It sounds cute. Have him send me the script." So off to Benny went the original by George W. George, who will produce under Lippert. (No, Jack—you won't have to pay me 10 per cent!)

The Hope Lange-Glenn Ford romance is chilling. They're good friends, but it's not the glowing attachment it was a few months ago. Glenn dates others, as does Hope. So we'll see what happens when Maria Scheil comes back to town.

Glenn had dinner with Yvette Mimieux a few nights ago, and is getting around. Careerwise, he's been approached to do "Two for the seesaw," opposite Shirley MacLaine, but this would be far in the future because there's still "Pocketful of Miracles" in the offing after he finishes "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Stanley Kramer planes into New York Thursday with a press conference already lined up at which he'll tell the world he has signed Judy Garland for "Judgment at Nuremberg." I get it straight that this is the real reason Judy came to the U.S.A., from England at this time. It was rumored that she was huddling about doing "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" on the London stage—but that was never very solid and has now fallen through.

The best dressed actor in motion pictures is Jack Lemmon—and the best dressed actor in TV is Ricky Nelson—at least this is the way the Men's Apparel Club of California has voted its annual style award in the professional group.

What with Frank Sinatra's inaugural wardrobe from Don Loper getting headline attention almost everywhere, the boys are making as much style news as the girls this year.

An amusing slant on this is that while the Eastern stylists singled out President-elect John Kennedy as a "back dated" dresser (seems his lapels are too wide) the Men's Apparel Club, Western group, proclaims him as potentially the best dressed President since George Washington!

The youthful Aga Khan, who inherited his amazing grandfather's title, is living in keeping with the late Aga's luxurious traditions. According to a friend of mine who met him in Gstaad, Switzerland during the holidays. The young ruler has an entourage of 47 aides, including six ski instructors, and the entire party occupy two floors of the most expensive Gstaad hotel.

In the party is a beautiful 18-year-old German girl, Inge Traut, with her parents who are chaperoning her. Many things have happened to young Karim whom I first met when he was 12 years old, at Rita Hayworth's wedding to his father, the late Aly Khan.

Let all the surmises about Bob Hope's state of health simmer down. There's nothing like a little rest—and for the first time in his life Bob has been minding his doctors and getting some.

There will be no delay in starting Bob's MGM movie "Bachelor in Paradise" in March. And if you think Robin isn't rarin' to go, he leaves with Bing Crosby in June for London where they will make "The Road to Hong Kong." These are two big pictures within months of one another plus Bob's TV shows—the newest of which beams Thursday night. All in all, the facts of life about Mr. Hope are all to the good.

Record Steel Year

LUXEMBOURG (UPI) — Steel production in the six nation European Steel and Coal Pool soared to a record height in 1960, it was announced Wednesday.

The high authority said steel production rose to 72,800,000 tons against 63,100,000 tons in 1959, an increase of 15.3 per cent.

Italy marked the greatest advance within the pool by turning out 8,200,000 tons against 6,700,000 tons in 1959, an increase of 21.5 per cent.

Holland's steel production rose from 1,600,000 tons in 1959 to 1,900,000 tons, or 16.1 per cent.

Finished Steel Lags

NEW YORK (UPI)—November mill shipments of finished steel products totaled 4,516,000 tons, down from the 4,900,000 tons in October and 4,800,000 tons in November, 1959, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

In the first eleven months of 1960 shipments totaled 67 million tons compared with the 61,200,000 tons shipped in the 1959 strike year.

Coalition Halts Increase In W.Va. Sales Tax

Action Is Termed Temporary Setback

By BILL BARRETT
United Press International

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—A handful of Democrats joined with the small Republican minority to block immediate enactment of a temporary increase in the state consumer sales tax for a "crash" public works program as the 55th West Virginia Legislature got under way Wednesday.

However, Democratic leaders, who are strongly supporting the legislature - eve proposal of Gov.-elect W. W. Barron, called it only a "temporary setback." There were strong indications that another effort would be made Thursday to rush through the measure.

It takes a four-fifths vote to suspend rules requiring that a bill be read on three consecutive days and the vote in the House of Delegates fell seven short. It was 73-27, with 10 Democrats joining 17 of the 18 Republican in opposition.

The Senate didn't try to put the question to a vote after hearing of the House action. Both chambers did, however, suspend committee reference and moved the proposal to second reading Thursday.

Under normal procedure this would mean a vote by Friday—meaning the program could begin by Sunday as Barron requested.

The estimated $5 to $6 million from the 7½-month sales tax hike would be used to put about 5,000 more jobless West Virginians to work on such things and road and roadside park improvements.

The action overshadowed the usual first - day formalities connected with opening a new legislative session and the final "state-of-the-state" address by outgoing Republican Gov. Cecil H. Underwood.

Without incident, Julius Singleton, Morgantown, was elected House speaker and Howard Carson, Fayetteville, was named Senate president. They had been picked earlier in caucus sessions of the Democratic legislators.

In a joint session, just before Underwood spoke, the legislature also reviewed results of the 1960 general election and formally declared Gov.-elect W. W. Barron and other Democratic state-wide candidates elected. Barron will be inaugurated as the state's 26th governor on Monday.

Retiring W. Va. Governor Urges Greater Power And Longer Executive Tenure

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—Gov. Cecil H. Underwood, in his last formal appearance before the West Virginia Legislature made a strong pitch Wednesday for greater power and longer tenure for future governors.

"If I were to suggest the one reform of government which I felt most essential, it would be to strengthen the executive," he said in the annual state-of-the-state address. "At the very least, a governor should be the only elected executive officer in the state; he should prepare the budget; and he should be permitted to seek re-election."

Underwood also reminded the legislators that there was no money in the budget presented by the Board of Public Works for continuation of the "STEP" program, the medical care program for the aged and the property reappraisal program initiated last year. He strongly urged continuation of all three.

He cited advancements in roads and schools in the past four years but added, "Much remains to be done."

Discussing the state's economic situation, Underwood said the coal fields of the state can never be the same.

"To suggest that the coal industry will employ the large numbers of people that it once did, is both dishonest and dangerous," he said. "Coal will remain the greatest natural resource of our state, but it will never regain a monopoly on the fuel market of the world."

He suggested a continuation of the job re - training program so that workers "could be moved to where jobs are."

"Our assistance should be directed to eliminating the conditions in the coal fields rather than simply keeping them alive and there," he added.

"What we are, we have made ourselves," he said. "We need look no further than our own conscience for the cause of our problems. We are judged not by what we might have been but by what we are. Whatever, our lot, we are judged in reaction to it."

West Virginia Legislators Presented 115 Million Dollar Operating Budget

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—The Board of Public Works Wednesday recommended to the legislature a $115,093,032 operating budget for state agencies for fiscal 1961-62 with two-thirds of the total ticketed for education.

The budget is some $4.2 million below the current appropriations. It called for 67.38 per cent of the total to be spent for education, 19.19 per cent for health and welfare, 4.43 per cent for general government, 2.41 per cent for charities and correction and 6.59 for other services.

The Board estimated that the state could expect to collect $115,110,000 in taxes and other fees during the next fiscal year and that on June 30, 1962, it anticipated a cash balance of $84,287.

No mention was made of the $4.5 million now being spent for the State Temporary Economic Program or a $1.5 million request from the Tax Department to continue the property reappraisal program.

By doing this the board, in effect, left these programs up to recommendation from Gov.-elect W. W. Barron who will outline his program in an address to the lawmakers Jan. 18.

A boost in current appropriations of $213,762 to the fiscal departments of government and $492,844 to the State Health Department were the major hikes recommended by the board.

The Department of Finance & Administration would get $125,687 of the fiscal boost. A three year-insurance policy on state capitol buildings would take $41,337 of this amount and $35,000 would be used for repairs to the buildings. Another $67,925 would be used to help Auditor-elect Denzil Gainer reorganize the department.

The additional money to the health department would be used to initiate a program of local health services. The department, for the past two years, has been trying to set up such a program which would reflect a drop in personnel at the state offices.

The budget shows that $77,455,091 would be spent for educational purposes, $22,067,758 for health and welfare, $5,094,084 for general government, $2,767,611 for charities and correction and $7,575,208 for other services.

General Government— Fiscal $2,465,647; judicial $1,031,780; legislative $861,000; executive $489,707; legal $164,870 and incorporating and recording $81,080.

Educational — State aid to schools $53,243,180; West Virginia University $8,752,662; State colleges $8,533,675; teachers retirement $5,723,178; state aid for exceptional children $235,000; textbook aid 150,000 and other educational $817,396.

Charities and correction— State prisons $1,581,348; industrial schools $652,987 and other charitable $533,276.

Health and welfare—Public assistance $10,466,480; mental health $6,498,215; tubercular sanitariums $1,753,270; health department $1,260,984; vocational rehabilitation $597,549 and other welfare $1,491,260.

Valley TV Plan Faces Financial Difficulties

Members Fail To Pay Pledges

MOOREFIELD, W. Va.—Pledges to the Valley TV Cooperative are coming in too slow and an immediate canvass will be made to collect unpaid funds. Charles Kuykendall, manager of the nonprofit cooperative, said that manufacturers installed translators and equipment and the community is getting good signals.

The board of directors, meeting Tuesday afternoon, appointed Edwin 'Biddy' Allen as agent for the cooperative to get in touch with every person who indicated they desired a choice of channels for TV entertainment. More than $3,000 is outstanding in unpaid pledges. The board has made arrangements with the South Branch Valley National Bank to accept notes for the cooperative and members may make monthly payments if they are unable to pay all of the pledge now.

The board of directors also made a request of members who had paid the pledge to pay the annual maintenance assessment of $5 as soon as possible. The annual $5 fee is used to pay the monthly power bill, insurance, replacement of fuses and general maintenance.

Kuykendall said that a good signal is being received and that it will improve as more adjustments are made. He said that it would be a shame to have to discontinue service on one channel because of lack of funds. An additional hundred members are needed.

Allen said he would be making contact with the members almost immediately.

Woman Scared By Monster

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va. (UPI) — A 19-year-old housewife was admitted to a hospital here Wednesday for treatment of shock after being badly frightened at her home by a man who "looked like a monster."

Mrs. Gene Chute of nearby Friendly told authorities when she returned home Tuesday night, a man leaped at her from the stairs to the living room. "He said all he wanted was my hair and kept repeating, 'raven black hair, raven black hair,'" she stated.

Mrs. Chute said the man grabbed her but let go when she pulled his ear. She said she fled to a neighbors house. The intruder was gone when police later checked her house.

The 5-foot-1 Mrs. Chute described the man as about 6 feet tall and weighing 190 pounds. She said he was bare - footed and "looked like he hadn't had a haircut in six months."

Succession Bill Is Proposed For W. Va. Officials

CHARLESTON, W. VA. (UPI)— Bills designed to maintain continuity of state government in the event of nuclear attack were approved for submission to the 55th West Virginia Legislature Tuesday by its two main interim committees.

One would extend the succession from governor down through the state attorney general, the state auditor and, in reverse order, to all ex - governors still living in West Virginia. Present law extends the line only from governor to president of the Senate and to speaker of the House of delegates.

The other measure would require that steps be taken to preserve all official state records and opens the way for local governing bodies to do the same.

W. Va. Mine Where 361 Died, To Close March 1

MONONGAH, W. Va. (UPI) — King coal will soon die in this little coal mining community of 1,319.

The Mountaineer Coal Co. announced Tuesday it will close its Monongah mine, throwing the dwindled force of 100 men out of work, effective March 1.

This is the mine where 361 men died on Dec. 6, 1907, in an explosion and fire, the worst mine disaster in the nation's history. The mine was then owned by Fairmont Coal Co.

For this little town in Marion County, coal has been its very life. As the mine started petering out, people began leaving. In the past 10 years the population has dropped nearly 20 per cent.

The last survivor of that disaster vividly remembered that cold, snowy morning in 1907.

Patrick H. McDonnell, Fairmont, said "I was about 50 feet outside when I met the explosion. A big gust of hot, black stuff hit me and nearly blew me from the trestle into the West Fork River."

The cause of the explosion, officially was the misfiring of an explosive charge. However, others though' it was started when some coal cars severed some electric wiring.

The town had a population of some 3,000 at the time and the explosion killed about half the town's working force. Some 250 widows and 1,000 children were left.

Dawson at Valley High, Lonaconing. In a letter to Miss Lamberson, Miss Hauser welcomed her to their Junior Editorial Advisory Board for exchange of ideas during 1961.

Martinsburg Defeats Allegany; Fort Ashby Trips Keyser

Alco Drops 77-71 Game To Bulldogs

AHS Blows Big Lead To Suffer Second Defeat

By TED TROXELL

The twice-postponed battle between Martinsburg and Allegany finally came off last night at Campobello, although Coach Chet Payne of the Campers probably wishes it hadn't, as he watched his team blow a substantial second half lead and lose out in the closing minutes, 77-71.

Originally scheduled for December 16, the game was reset for December 22 when hazardous travel conditions prevented Martinsburg from making the trip here. Foul weather again caused a postponement until last night. In the meantime, the Bulldogs rolled along to a perfect 5-0 record, while Allegany shoved its mark to 6-1.

Campers Pull Away

Late in the third period, the Campers pulled away by 13 points, 59-46, but a one-hander by Doug Lamp, Jacobs' three-point play, and Bartock's jumper cut the margin to 59-53 as the quarter ended, and in the final frame the West Virginians cut loose for 24 points.

With Jacobs hitting from outside with deadly accuracy, the Bulldogs caught up with their hosts, who had led since midway in the second period, at 69-all. A jump shot by Jacobs knotted the count with about two minutes left, at which point the Campers, in spite of their experience, seemed to fall apart.

Moving the ball downcourt following Jacobs' bucket, the Campers got tied up at the midcourt line and out of the scramble came a personal foul against Allegany's Wayne Shook. Bartock, who converted eight consecutive free throws in the decisive fourth quarter, promptly dropped in the two that gave Martinsburg a lead it kept.

Two charity tosses apiece by Bartock and John Karns and a field goal by Lamp upped the Bulldogs' advantage to 77-69 over the Cumberlanders, who couldn't regain their composure. Mervin Pope hit on a layup with 10 seconds to go, but by that time it was all over but the shouting, and the small crowd of Martinsburg followers who journeyed here was doing plenty of that.

Luzier Hits Twice

With only four minutes to go, Allegany led by eight points, 67-59, after a pair of jump shots by Doug Luzier within the period of less than a minute gave the Campers some breathing room. At this point however, Luzier, a rugged cager who seems to give the Campers some life during his infrequent appearances in the lineup, was substituted for and watched the rest of the contest from the bench.

The first half found Allegany jumping off to a 41-33 lead, chiefly on the strength of a 21-25 performance at the foul line. The Campers were outgoaled, 13-10, but compensated for it at the foul line. Sixteen personals were called against Martinsburg in the first two periods. Gary Phalen, who tallied 11 of the Bulldogs 17 points in the opening quarter, fouled out with only 16 seconds gone in the second period.

Martinsburg wound up with a 29-23 edge in field goals. The Bulldogs, who took 71 shots from the floor, had a .408 percentage, while Allegany's average was just a shade lower at .404.

Bartock finished with 29 points to take game scoring honors. Eleven of his tallies came at the foul line, where he missed only twice in 13 tries. Pope made nine of 15 field goal attempts and converted six of nine free throws for a 24-point night.

Paul Price Scores 28 Points; Tornado Loses Fourth Tilt

KEYSER, W. Va.—Fort Ashby High's Eagles upended the Keyser High Golden Tornado here last night, handing Coach Estel "Eck" Miers' cagers their second straight defeat, 55-50, in a Potomac Valley Conference engagement.

The loss was the fourth in nine games for Keyser, normally a perennial contender for the PVC crown, and gave the Tornado a 3-3 mark in the conference. Fort Ashby upped its season's mark to 6-3 and is now 5-2 in the PVC.

The Eagles trailed 14-10 at the end of the first quarter but rallied to knot the count at 26-all at intermission. The visitors then edged ahead in the final half to register the victory. No more than five points separated the two teams throughout the game in the nip-and-tuck contest.

Coach Quentin Sayers' Eagles actually earned the verdict at the foul line where Fort Ashby tallied 23 of 36 chances. Outscoring the Eagles, 21-16 from the field, Keyser could only garner 8 of 15 free throws.

Paul Price was Fort Ashby's big gun with 28 points, 13 of them coming in the second period when the Eagles scored 16 times. He picked the Eagles up in the final period with a brace of goals after Keyser pulled within one point at 40-39. Charles Hinkle added three fouls to help pull his team further ahead.

Goalby To Seek Third Straight Golfing Victory

$20,000 San Diego Open Begins Today

Goalby, 29-year-old shot maker from Crystal River, Fla., won the Los Angeles Open on Monday and the last event of the 1960 tour at Coral Gables, Fla., in December.

"Naturally it would be nice to make it three in a row," said Goalby, who won $7,500 for taking first place in the rich Los Angeles event.

The tournament will be played on the long, flat Mission Valley Country Club within two miles of downtown San Diego.

The field includes most of the country's top professionals, including Arnold Palmer, the leading money winner, National Open and Masters' champion of 1960. Palmer made a different kind of headlines to start the 1961 campaign when he took a staggering 12 on the last hole of the first round of the Los Angeles Open. It was such a bad start that he fell out of contention after the first two rounds.

"I'll forget all about that and see what happens here," said Palmer as he prepared for this tournament.

Among the other top competitors are such men as former Open champ Tommy Bolt, who has won here twice; defending San Diego champion Mike Souchak, who didn't play exceptionally well in Los Angeles; local stars Billy Casper and Gene Littler; British pair Max Faulkner and Eric Brown; and Jay and Lionel Hebert.

AFL Owners Meet Today

Expansion Plans Are On Agenda

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—American Football League club owners Thursday begin their winter meeting, with no indication that heavy inaugural season financial losses have dampened enthusiasm for 1961.

There had been predictions from some areas a year ago the AFL would not get through its first season. But the eight club owners will begin two days of discussions with expansion as one of the items on the agenda.

No expansion is indicated this year but such cities as Philadelphia, Chicago, Cincinnati, Seattle, Kansas City, Jacksonville, Fla., Memphis, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., have figured in speculation on 1962.

There was definite indication, however, the league may authorize immediate transfer of the Los Angeles Chargers to San Diego.

Barron Hilton, owner of the Chargers, and K.S. (Bud) Adams Jr., owner of the Houston Oilers, are among the year's heaviest financial losers despite having fielded division champions.

The Los Angeles losses have been estimated as high as $900,000. Adams has placed his first season deficit at $710,000, plus $70,000 he spent while winning a court fight with the Los Angeles Rams over the services of Billy Cannon.

6,182 Deer Slain During Maryland Hunting Season

The Maryland Department of Game and Inland Fish yesterday released an official figure of 6,182 deer reported killed during the 1960 hunting season. This compares to a total kill of 4,564 in 1959, the commission added.

There were 818 deer killed during the three-day anterless season on the Eastern Shore, the report stated.

In addition the department said some 103,980 evergreen trees, 600 hardwood trees and 403,380 shrubs were planted on state and private lands during 1960 to improve wildlife habitat.

The department also reported the completion of a survey of 3,619 acres of woodland on Dan's Mountain in Allegany County for a public hunting area.

Warmath Named Coach Of Year

Association Picks Minnesota Mentor

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The American Football Coaches Association Wednesday night named Murray Warmath of Minnesota major college coach of the year and Warren Woodson of New Mexico State the minor college coach of the year.

The association said voting was close in both divisions with Jim Owens of the University of Washington and Clarence Stasavich of Lenoir Rhyne College, Hickory, N.C., finishing as strong runners-up in the respective divisions.

As coach of the Minnesota Gophers, Warmath took his team from last place in the Big Ten in 1959 to the Associated Press ranked national championship in 1960. Minnesota won eight of nine games in regular season play but lost 17-7 to Washington in the Rose Bowl.

Woodson coached the Aggies to an undefeated season after they had 21 losing seasons. New Mexico state went undefeated through 11 games last year, including a 20-14 victory over Utah State in the Sun Bowl.

NCAA Approves Three New Bowl Games In Long Session

Rule Limits Athletes To Five Years

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The lawmakers for college sports ran into a small college rebellion Wednesday at one of the longest and windiest National Collegiate Athletic Association sessions in several years and wound up by passing only about half the controversial legislation that concerned in-season eligibility of players.

After disposing of non-controversial business early—including approval of three new football bowl games and the passing of a couple of restrictive rules about recruiting—the delegates talked themselves into a state of exhaustion and confusion before the session ended.

A key statement of "fundamental policy" barely mustered the necessary two-thirds majority. But a rule limiting college athletes to competition within five calender years passed by an unexpectedly large vote.

Compromise Rule

Under this rule, described as a compromise between the four-year limit originally suggested and the need to recognize hardship cases, an athlete must complete his eligibility within five years of the time he first registers at any college. The committee's original idea was to try to end the practice of holding a football player out of competition for one season when he's not needed and thus prolonging his educational process as well as his competitive career.

Two constitutional amendments that were tabled were a proposal for a national pre-registration program under NCAA control and supervision and a proposal for a national transfer rule. It was mainly the small colleges that objected to these propositions as designed to solve the special problems of the bigger members that engage in intensive recruiting.

Also passed was legislation to curb high school all-star football and basketball games and to discourage the importation of overseas foreign athletes.

Other activities were:

Confirming through the NCAA Council report that the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union have broken off their long-standing alliance. The NCAA said it no longer will respect AAU suspensions. The breach may be healed, however, as committees from both organizations are working toward a new alliance.

New Bowl Games

Approving three new bowl games—the Presidential Trophy at Washington, D.C., the Aviation Bowl at Dayton, Ohio and the Los Angeles Mercy Bowl.

Requiring that when a prospective athlete gets a visit to a college campus at the expense of someone who wouldn't normally pay the way, that person also must accompany him on the visit.

Ruling that colleges may not pay expenses for athletic talent scouts in recruiting and may not claim he is a staff member and entitled to expenses by paying him a regular fee.

The statement of policy, which put into the NCAA constitution that eligibility, financial aid, recruiting and admissions policies are a part of the association's business, passed by a 137-66 margin, mustering only one more vote than was necessary.

Cincinnati Signs Four New Players

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Cincinnati Reds announced Wednesday the signing of four players to contracts and the assignment of six farm team managers.

Those signed were pitchers Marshall Bridges, Marv Fodor and Harvey Alex and second baseman Tommy Harper. Bridges had a 4-0 record as a relief pitcher with the Reds after moving up Aug. 2 last year.

The Reds also announced they have signed two young players into their organization. They are Bill Spalding, 19, a second baseman, Washington, D. C., and pitcher Roland Passaor, 23, Slatington, Pa.

Rinaldi, Ray To Meet Friday

Orioles Farm Director Quits

Dalton To Replace James McLaughlin

McLaughlin, 45, has been connected with major league baseball since 1939, when he became an office assistant to Bill DeWitt of the St. Louis Browns.

An Oriole spokesman said the resignation was accepted "with regret." He said he did not know McLaughlin's future plans.

President Lee MacPhail said Harry Dalton, 32, will be the new farm director. He has been McLaughlin's assistant for the past seven years.

Dalton, from West Springfield, Mass., was graduated from Amherst College in 1950. After serving three years in the Air Force, he joined the Orioles. He is credited with signing pitcher Steve Barber, who won 10 games in his rookie season with Baltimore last year.

Race Tracks Dispute Goes To High Court

Shenandoah Seeks Prohibition Writ

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)—A dispute over racing dates involving two race tracks in Jefferson County and the West Virginia Racing Commission was taken to the Supreme Court Wednesday.

Attorneys for Shenandoah Downs race track asked the high court for a writ of prohibition against the Jefferson County Circuit Court. The writ, if granted, would prohibit enforcement of a writ of mandamus granted by the lower court at the request of Charles Town race track.

The dispute started when Charles Town and Shenandoah both filed for dates that were conflicting and overlapping. The commission rejected both petitions and suggested dates of its own.

Attorneys for the Charles Town track then obtained the mandamus order to prevent the commission from granting any dates until the dispute is settled.

Shenandoah claims that while it is technically not a party to the mandamus proceeding, it is being injured by enforcement of that order.

Ilsa Konrads Wins Freestyle Crown

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Ilsa Konrads won the 110-yard freestyle title for the third consecutive year Wednesday in the New South Wales swimming championships at the Sydney Olympic Pool.

Miss Konrads, who finished second twice in Tuesday's qualifications, clocked the distance in one minute, 04.4 seconds. Helen Bartier, who had the best clocking for the event in the qualifying round, and Ruth Everuss both were clocked in 1:05.9, but second place was awarded to Miss Bartier.

Molinas Loses Suit Against NBL, Podoloff

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Molinas, the basketball star who bet on his own team to win, lost his battle for reinstatement to the National Basketball Association Wednesday. His $3,000,000 suit against the league and its president, Maurice Podoloff, was dismissed.

In his decision, Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman said Molinas had "completely failed" to establish that any boycott conspiracy existed or that the defendants had given instructions regarding an alleged blacklisting of Molinas.

Molinas had charged Podoloff and the NBA with violating the anti-trust laws in instigating an alleged boycott against him in pro basketball after Molinas was suspended for betting on his own team, the Fort Wayne Pistons, to win in 1954.

All-Star Bowling Tourney To Begin Today In California

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) —The first All-Star Bowling Tournament in the West since the event's inception in 1941 gets under way Thursday.

Determined to make their first all-star visit to California a memorable one, the sponsoring Bowling Proprietors' Association of America has boosted the total prize fund to a record $68,150, more than $8,000 above last year's kitty in Omaha.

Most experts regard four-time champion Don Carter and defending champion Harry Smith, both of St. Louis as favorites of the 240 men's field.

Bisons To Play In Big Stadium

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bisons of the International Baseball League were assured Wednesday of playing their 1961 home games in spacious War Memorial Stadium.

Vikings Obtain Giants' Shaw In NFL Trade

Quarterback Pleased At New Chance

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn (UPI)—The fledgling Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League secured veteran quarterback George Shaw Wednesday to guide the team through its first season next fall.

Vikings' General Manager Bert Rose said Shaw was obtained from New York in exchange for the Minnesota club's top draft choice in 1962.

Shaw, 27, a veteran of six years of professional ball, should "provide us with a steady job of quarterbacking in our first year in the campaign," Rose said.

Shaw said he did not ask to be traded as he did two years ago after playing for four seasons with the Baltimore Colts. But he said he is "thrilled at the prospect of being a charter member of the Minnesota club."

Rose hailed Shaw as "one of the finest passers in the league." The one-time University of Oregon star has a lifetime professional passing record of 310 completions in 601 attempts for 4,489 yards and 33 touchdowns.

Shaw's professional career has been played in the shadow of greater quarterbacks. He asked to be traded two years ago after the sensational rise of Johnny Unitas. And at New York, he always played in the shadow of Charlie Conerly.

Rose said rookie Francis Tarkenton of Georgia, who previously was signed, will be the team's No. 2 quarterback.

Wid Matthews Gets Post With New York Club

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wid Matthews, a major league baseball scout for 25 years, was named Wednesday assistant general manager of the New York club which will operate in the National League in 1962.

Matthews will scout and sign players, just as he did for the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooklyn Dodgers under Branch Rickey, and in recent years for the Chicago Cubs and Milwaukee Braves.

The appointment was announced by Charles Hurth, general manager of the New York club.

The 64-year-old Matthews, who once played for the Philadelphia Athletics and the Washington Senators, joined Rickey as a scout at St. Louis in 1935 and moved with him to Brooklyn in 1942. He switched to the Cubs in 1951 and to the Braves in 1957.

NEW YORK (UPI)—A leading baseball statistician predicted on Tuesday a flock of new records will be set when the major leagues go to a 162-game schedule "but nothing dramatic unless the new clubs are so weak they distort the picture."

"The extra eight games for the American League next year and the National in 1962 normally wouldn't threaten the big records like Babe Ruth's 60 home runs in one year," said Seymour Siwoff of the Elias Baseball Bureau which keeps official National League statistics and publishes the "Little Red Book" of official records.

"But if the new clubs turn out to be pushovers, particularly in pitching, anything can happen. You might have three or four sluggers hitting 65 home runs and certainly that would embarrass the game."

Lesser Marks To Fall

Lesser records will tumble by the dozens. They include things like games played, putouts, assists, strikeouts by batsmen, at bats and various other categories easily affected by the increase from 154 games per season to 162.

Last year, for instance the Yankees set a new league home run record of 193. That could go by the boards with eight extra games. So, perhaps, could the American League record of 70 games worked last year by pitcher Mike Fornieles of the Boston Red Sox.

"Everyone worries most about Ruth's record of 60 in 1927," said Siwoff. "But just adding eight games to the schedule wouldn't threaten that mark, according to the recent trend.

Pitchers On Top

"The pitchers lately have been getting the upper hand. Ernie Banks of the Cubs led the majors with 41 homers in 156 games last year. Mickey Mantle had 40 in 153 games and Roger Maris had 39 in 138. Obviously, the addition of eight extra games wouldn't help them make up the difference between that pace and Ruth's record."

There'd be a real worry, he said, if Mantle had a full season of hitting in Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, home of the new Angels.

"Mickey has so much power he could really bomb in that park," said Siwoff. "I understand they're planning to put a screen in left center but that wouldn't hurt him much. Bill Skowron and others with real power will like that park, too.

As the new general manager of the Kansas City Athletics, frantic Frankie will shake 'em up, shoot 'em around and almost certainly will move 'em up beyond their eighth-place finish of 1960.

Kansas City's problems of the moment have nothing to do with pennants. They have, however, "bought" themselves a general manager who's a positive genius at rescuing hopeless ball clubs.

It all started a dozen years and more than 400 trades ago.

"I got Billy Pierce and $10,000 to boot from the Detroit Tigers for a catcher named Aaron Robinson," says Lane.

That was on Nov. 10, 1948, his first major deal as the new general manager of the Chicago White Sox. Pierce went on to become one of the American League's great left handed pitchers. Lane went on to yank the White Sox out of the cellar and become one of the dizziest traders in baseball history.

Will Trade Anyone

He'll trade super-stars, home town heroes or what he calls "vest buttons" — players who don't mean much to anyone.

"When I was with the White Sox I got Nellie Fox from the Athletics for Joe Tipton," says Lane. "That was vest buttons. Except Fox turned out to be a star."

Lane lifted the White Sox from eighth to third in seven years, the St. Louis Cardinals from seventh to second in two years and the Cleveland Indians from sixth to second and back to fourth in thre years.

He talks a lot and follows it up with action.

"Why shouldn't I talk?" he snorts. "There's no point in keeping things to yourself. And certainly there's no point in keeping trade talks secret if you're trying to make a trade."

Talk Creates Interest

The point in talking, of course, is that it gets into the papers, the customers read it and interest in Lane's ball club is created where no interest may have existed before.

Lane doesn't mind talking about his boners, either.

"The worst deal I've made so far was trading Bill Virdon from the Cardinals to the Pirates for Bobby Del Greco," he admits. "When I boot 'em I do it up good."

But at Cleveland he also dealt off the likes of Minnie Minoso, Herb Score, Rocky Colavito and even Harvey Kuenn, for whom he swapped Colavito.

He traded Red Schoendienst from the Cardinals and once threatened to unload Stan Musial, until the citizens, led by owner Gussie Busch blew the whistle.

"Everyone makes bad deals," he says. "If I'm right 65 per cent of the time I figure I'm all right."

Lane has two bits of philosophy about his trades:

1. Don't try to cheat the other guy; he won't trade with you again.

2. Forget the player you traded away even if he turns out to be a star; if you want him back, make another deal for him.

Market Closes Higher On Late Buying Flurry

NEW YORK (UPI) — A buying flurry in the last hour enabled the stock market to finish with a modest gain on average Wednesday.

Prices which staged an irregular though ragged advance in the opening minutes, degenerated thereafter into a hodge podge of minor price changes.

Technicians have been making much of the fact that the market had reached a point where it was likely to encounter a band of stiff overhead resistance. The consensus in the street is that while individual issues may continue to give good performances, the general list was now susceptible to a short-term correction.

Chemicals led by Du Pont with a gain of 2⅛ were mostly firm. American Viscose added 1⅝ and Allied Chemical ⅞. Union Carbide lost a small fraction.

Steels, strong this week on a brighter outlook for orders and operations generally, showed losses of a half or more in National, Youngstown and Bethlehem. U.S. Steel managed to eke out a fractional gain at 80⅞.

Trading shrank on the rise to 4,370,000 shares from 4,840,000 the day before. A total of 1,271 issues crossed the tape and of these 608 advanced, 64 to new highs, while 449 declined, 5 to new lows.

All-State Choristers Leave

These Allegany County members of the All-Maryland High School Chorus are shown leaving for Washington yesterday on the B&O's Daylight Speedliner. They will sing with the chorus tomorrow night at the Eastern Music Educators Convention at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington. The boy friends of two of the girls in the group made an unscheduled trip with the choristers. The train pulled out while the young men were helping the girls with their luggage, and they weren't able to get off till the train got to Martinsburg. They hitched a ride back home, arriving about five hours later than they had planned.

Red 'Paradise' Drives People To Drink

BERLIN (UPI) — The East Germans have recognized that Communism is driving people to drink and have decided to do something about it.

The East Berlin Health Department has recommended a ban on all liquor advertising, increased production of soft drinks and establishment of police-run sobering-up stations.

The sobering-up plan envisages a physical examination of all drunks to see if they are diseased, their registration and notification of their employers. The drunks would pay the costs.

An anti-liquor campaign run by a Committee for Healthy Living was also recommended.

It disclosed that one-fourth of the persons brought to hospitals with injuries after 4 p.m. are drunk.

It said last year enough alcohol was sold in East Berlin to give every man, woman and child 4.15 quarts of wine, 4.73 quarts of spirits, and 81.1 quarts of beer.

Excessive drinking is not confined to East Germany. It has become a problem throughout the Soviet bloc.

Drinking probably has increased in all nations since World War II. But in Eastern Europe drunkenness almost has become a part of the Communist way of life.

It is thought that harsh economic conditions, unceasing propaganda and the extreme joylessness of life under Communism is driving people to drink.

Rowing Women Have Good Record

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) —Any Wednesday morning a group of sprightly matrons can be found expertly rowing navy whaleboats around Lake Merritt in the heart of Oakland.

Dressed in middies and blue skirts, the women, ranging in age from 33 to 85, stroke across the large lake in boats provided by the recreation department.

They are known as the Oakland Women's Rowing Club and, in the past 44 years, have become famous for their unusual recreation.

The club was started in 1916 by the late Mrs. Maud Aiken when a group of women decided that volley ball was a bore. It since has grown to 65 members with the longest membership held by Mrs. Julia Viereck, 72, who has been with the club 39 years.

And despite the advanced age of most members, none has ever lost an oar or fallen overboard.

A big moment came last year when the ladies rescued two young men who had capsized in a small sailboat. The young men? They were sailors on a busman's holiday.

Proper defensive discarding as declarer runs a suit at no trump is a problem that besets even the more experienced player. Observe East's performance in today's hand.

West opened the six of hearts, and East played the encouraging nine. Declarer then proceeded to run the diamonds and East saw that he would have to arrange to make three early discards. The first one was easy, the three of hearts, completing his echo in that suit. Next came the seven of spades, signaling control of that suit, and then the jack of hearts for the purpose of unblocking the suit.

The important consideration is that East, looking at four clubs in dummy, must hold on to four clubs himself. Obviously West can have no more than three clubs for the two no trump bid marks declarer with at least two. If one of West's clubs is the jack, East's four to the ten will constitute a stopper.

If declarer has both the ace and jack of clubs, hope for defeating the contract must be abandoned. If it is pointed out that dummy has four spades, and that East may be concerned with holding four cards of that suit, there is a ready answer. If South has the king of hearts, his nine tricks are in plain view — four diamonds, two hearts and three clubs. It becomes clear, therefore, that East's only vital spade is the ace.

Declarer realizing his danger, tried to find a favorable club break and, when this failed to materialize, he led a low spade from dummy with the intention of sneaking in the king. But East rose to the occasion with his ace and returned the killing heart.

Navy Base Guard Old West Type

CHINA LAKE, Calif. (UPI) — Sewell (Pop) Lofinck is a throwback to the Old West. He almost has to be in his job—patrolling a desolate area bigger than the state of Rhode Island.

Lifinck is a security guard at this largest of naval test stations and his job is to keep people out o. the 1,700-square miles of rugged desert country used for testing the latest weapons.

He rides the range in a specially equipped Jeep, sometimes staying out by himself for as long as two weeks. He comes in to the test station only for supplies.

Pop — as he's affectionately known—carries a six-gun in a fast draw holster that he proudly uses with skill.

"Yep," admitted the Kansas-born Lofinck. "I guess I'm somewhat of a throwback. But I've been at this 13 years and I like it."

He's sort of vague about his age and birthplace.

"I'm from southeast Kansas," he said, "where all the nuts come from. Carrie Nation—you know—that kind. The trouble with people born there is that they're crusaders.

"Now I'm not a crusader—except against crusaders," he said.

Lofinck tried other worlds before he decided on this one—"No, I don't get lonesome, I read and I think."

He said he started out as a fur trapper, but became a salesman, a credit investigator and a commercial reporter "for all that money."

"But I got out and went back to nature," said the confirmed bachelor. "I didn't like all that pressure. And then, too, I found that when I was around people all the time, I didn't like them nearly as much as when I got off to myself occasionally."

Pop, who admits to being "sixtyish," is an expert trapper and made the first map of this area about 150 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

He stoutly defends his six-gun over a rifle. "It's always with you," he said. "And it's impressive—the bigger, the more impressive."

Apartments Damaged In 3-Alarm Fire

Fireman, Overcome By Smoke, Taken To Local Hospital

A local fireman, overcome by smoke, was hospitalized here yesterday afternoon during a three-alarm fire which caused heavy fire, water, and smoke damage to an apartment house at 306 Washington Street.

Lt. Harold L. McDonald, 33, of 1009 Lexington Avenue, was admitted to Sacred Heart Hospital where he was taken in the emergency truck of the local fire department. His condition last night was reported as "good."

The fire started in the basement apartment of the four-story brick and frame dwelling which is owned by Frank Gigliotti, and ate its way up through the partitions in the front of the structure.

Central and West Side firemen were called at 3:42 p.m., and 10 minutes later firemen from East Side station were called. Meanwhile, volunteers from nearby Ridgeley filled in at Central station.

Local firemen last night were investigating the origin of the blaze, which caused heavy damage to the basement and front rooms of the first and second floor apartments.

Three Flee Building

Three persons escaped from the burning building. Mrs. James Gormer who with her husband and son lives on the third floor, was lying down at the time the fire broke out. She ran outside.

Mrs. Oswald Gigliotti, who lives on the first floor with her husband and two children, escaped from the home with her four-year-old daughter Cathy.

Mrs. Gigliotti said she was ironing in one of the rooms of her apartment when her little girl, who had been playing with toys in the basement, came running up the steps crying. Her mother went to the basement and found one of the rooms smoke-filled.

Mrs. Gigliotti said she shut the door of the room and ran back upstairs to notify firemen. The smoldering fire which caused thick, billowy smoke apparently had a good start before firemen were called.

About 20 city firemen including off-duty men fought the stubborn blaze for over an hour. West Side was still on the scene last night.

Hoses Burst

Fire Scenes

Firemen from three local companies battle a stubborn fire in an apartment house at 306 Washington Street late yesterday afternoon (top photo) as spectators watch. The fire, which broke out in the basement of the home once owned by Senator George Wellington, caused heavy damage throughout the building.

Planning Board Offers Aid On Hospital Site

Hears Proposal Of Baltimore Firm

The Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission last night offered its services to the Sisters of Charity of St. Joseph and the Sacred Heart Hospital's executive committee in securing a location for the Sacred Heart Hospital within the City of Cumberland.

The order recently announced plans for erecting a new modern hospital on a new site in Cumberland or the immediate vicinity.

The new hospital will provide 150 beds, 15 more than at the present Decatur Street location, and is estimated to cost about $3,500,000.

The commission also invited the firm of Whitman, Requardt and Associates, Baltimore, to prepare its analysis of the present and future needs of Cumberland.

Offer Services

Raymond C. Regnier, a partner in the firm, and John B. Gillett, project engineer, met with the board to offer the firm's services for preparing a master plan for the city.

Such a plan is needed to qualify Cumberland for federal aid in the housing and urban renewal fields.

The Baltimore company in 1947 prepared a master plan for Cumberland, which dealt chiefly with the city's needs in roads, utilities and public works. The new plan would update this study for today's needs.

One prime objective, it was explained, would be to do something about the "dead spots" left here as the move to the suburbs advances.

Plans were made to invite representatives of the Washington firm of Hayes, Seay, Matern and Matern to meet with the commission at its January 25 meeting.

Ask Ordinance

The commission recently authorized the Pittsburgh firm of Morris Knowles, Inc., to present a formal report on its proposal. This report is due soon.

At the suggestion of Albert S. Paye, chairman, the commission will also confer with the Cincinnati firm of Ladislas Segoe and Associates, which was selected as planning consultants for Allegany County.

The choice of a planning firm will probably be limited to one of these four, since they are considered representative.

The commission adopted a motion by Stanley Zorick, commission member, that the city engineer and city attorney cooperate in preparing an ordinance which would require all new buildings in the business area to be set back an adequate distance.

Pay Boost For Teachers Favored

By GEORGE BOWEN

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—The estimated cost of providing more local aid for education and welfare climbed to $8,963,691 Wednesday while a movement swelled for even more pay for school teachers.

The earlier estimate of the cost to the state of putting into effect recommendations of the Legislative Council's Committee on Taxation for increasing local aid was $8,339,151.

That was based on data of two years ago, however. The revised up-to-date figures added more than $600,000.

Gov. Tawes has endorsed the additional aid, but said it should be accompanied by increased taxes even though the upcoming budget might be balanced without them.

Fiscal advisers have advocated collecting more taxes as a cushion for two years hence.

Among the latest to go on record opposed to this idea was Del. James C. Latham, D-Talbot.

"If a tax increase is not needed this year, I'm not in favor of it," he declared at a meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee which laid the groundwork for grappling with the money problems of the session.

A subcommittee headed by Del. Blair E. Lee III, D-Montgomery, was named to make a detailed study of the recommendations of the Legislative Council along with any conflicting proposals.

Compromise Plan

Among the prospective alternates reportedly gaining strong backing and expected to be introduced shortly in a so-called compromise plan authorizing more teacher pay.

It would provide $10.6 million for education as contrasted with $6.4 million of the council plan and $11.7 being sought by the Maryland State Teachers Association.

The compromise, which even before introduction was being given strong predictions of passage, would increase state minimum scales for teachers $600. They now range from $3,200-$5,300.

The council program would raise it $400. The teachers association proposes the starting scale be hiked $800 and the maximum $700.

Tawes is expected to call for lowering the base of the sales tax if it is decided to grant the increased education and welfare aid.

Cigaret Tax Hearing Set

The legislature already has been asked to impose a uniform state tax of six cents on a package of cigarets.

Opposition to this proposal will be aired at a hearing by the Ways and Means Committee next Wednesday.

Latham's resistance to collecting more taxes next year for use in the following budget is likely to pick up some support.

"I want my position to be known early," he said. "It seems bad to legislate for the future.

"We should face any tax increase when the time comes."

Tawes' budget is not due to be received by the legislature until Jan. 24. He started this fiscal year with a $12 million reserve fund and is expected to pick up another $11 million in surplus by June 30.

The only final action taken by the legislature Wednesday afternoon was in the Senate. It passed four of its bills, including one to require municipal governments to liquidate their liability for their employes in the retirement system administered by the State within 19 years. The bill now goes to the House.

Tax Exemption

Another Senate - passed bill would exempt Baltimore City bonds and stocks from taxation, making them more attractive investments.

Moves were renewed to establish a program of driver education in the public schools and to ban the sale of obscene literature to children under 18.

The driver education bill was sponsored in the House by Del. Edgar Silver, D-Balto 5th, chairman of the Motor Vehicles Committee, and Dels. Maurice Cardin, D-Balto 5th, Noel Speir Cook, R-Allegany, and Joseph Acker, D-Balto 3rd.

It would finance the program of driver education by increasing from $4 to $5 the fee now required for learner permits.

PTAs Would Support Taxes For Education

Ask Promise Schools Will Get Share

Maryland PTA leaders are letting it be known that they will support three tax proposals favored by Gov. J. Millard Tawes only if they are assured that education will get its share of the new revenues.

Mrs. Fred L. Bull, legislation chairman of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, said the PTA leaders are prepared to "go out and sell" the tax proposals to their members if they are given this assurance.

Mrs. Bull pointed out that Gov. Tawes has announced his approval of three revenue measures —doubling the state tax on cigarets, lowering the base of the sales tax, and placing a tax on restaurant meals.

"We're not asking for all the proceeds, but we'd like to know that the state's contribution to education will be increased by the new revenues," she said.

Mrs. Bull, who lives in Baltimore County, has been speaking to PTA groups in Western Maryland this week to outline a program for increased aid to education sponsored jointly by the MCPT and the Maryland State Teachers Association.

Speaks To County Groups

She spoke to the Garrett County PTA Council and the county teachers association Monday night, to the Allegany County Council of Parents and Teachers at Frostburg Tuesday night, and was in Washington County yesterday.

They reported that the Garrett County group voted unanimously to petition Gov. Tawes and the county's legislators to support the joint MCPT-MSTA program.

The Allegany County Council PTA Tuesday night took no formal action until hearing from member PTA groups, but Mrs. Bull said those attending supported the joint program.

The joint program calls for $9,453,145 in additional state aid for teachers' salaries and $2,274,081 in state aid for non-salary education costs. Total cost of the program is $11,727,226.

Trial Today In Hit-Run Accident Here

Stephen L. DuVall Faces Charge

Stephen Lee DuVall, 21, of 521 Woodside Avenue, driver of an automobile which police said struck and seriously injured a local woman on December 1, will be given a hearing this morning in Trial Magistrate Court.

DuVall, who has been charged in the hit-run accident in which Miss Marguerite Fahey, 56, of 447 Cumberland Street, was injured, is slated to be tried today at 10 a. m. before Magistrate Paul W. Barnett.

City Police arrested DuVall several days after the accident and after being questioned by County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya he reportedly admitted he was the operator of the vehicle which struck Miss Fahey.

The accident occurred about 5 p. m. on December 1 in the first block of Cumberland Street. Miss Fahey was on her way home from work when she was struck by the auto.

She sustained chin and neck lacerations, brush burns, a compound fracture of the left leg, and internal injuries. Miss Fahey was released from Sacred Heart Hospital just before Christmas.

The specific charge against DuVall is failure to stop and identify himself after being involved in a personal injury accident.

Authorities said the charge, upon conviction, carries a penalty of imprisonment from 30 days to a year, a fine of $50 to $1,000 or both.

Guard Company Plans Formal Inspection

National Guard Company C, First Medium Tank Battalion, 115th Armor, will conduct a formal command inspection January 18 at the Brown Avenue Armory by the battalion commander and staff officers.

Lieutenant Normad D. Messman, company commander said last night the inspection will be conducted by Lt. Col. Robert C. Matlick; Major Paul B. Lord, 1st Lt. Jonathan J. Eckhart; Captain Eugene M. Light and SFC Charles Griffith.

The inspection will include supply, administration, maintenance, and a line inspection of personnel. This will be the final formal battalion inspection before the annual general inspection February 1 by the inspector general's office, headquarters Second Army, Fort George G. Meade.

Jaycee Week Observance Opens Sunday

A proclamation urging all citizens of the city to help Jaycees observe the anniversary was adopted by the Mayor and Council Monday.

Jaycee week, which will run until Saturday, January 21, will be climaxed next Wednesday with the annual Bosses' Night banquet honoring bosses of all Jaycees here.

The banquet will be held at the Cumberland Country Club, beginning at 6:30 p. m.

Jaycee Week celebrates the founding of the Jaycee movement in St. Louis in 1915. It has expanded to an organization of a quarter million members in some 3,700 chapters in the United States. It has also spread through the world with the Junior Chamber International represented in 90 countries by 350,000 members in over 4,500 chapters, the third largest international club in existence.

COLLECTION DAY TODAY

Magistrates Endorsed By Democrats

The Democratic State Central Committee of Allegany County has endorsed all the county's trial magistrates for reappointment for a second two-year period, according to Thomas B. Finan, chairman.

The names have been submitted to Gov. J. Millard Tawes for his consideration and submission to the State Senate for final confirmation.

The committee also endorsed four persons for appointment as assessor-assistant, to fill a vacancy in the county assessment division which resulted after the death of Somerville Nicholson and promotion of J. H. Stitley to supervisor.

These four names, including William Kelly of Lonaconing, John Mullaney, Paul Stakem and Alfred Hutter of Cumberland, have been submitted to Albert Ward of the State Tax Commission as recommendations from the committee.

The State Central Committee also considered plans for a fund-raising Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner to be held in March or early April. Leslie J. Clark was named to coordinate plans for the affair with the Democratic Women's Club and the Young Democratic clubs.

Mr. Finan said several other routine matters were discussed by the committee and several other pending appointments were outlined but no formal action was taken.

The magistrates endorsed for reappointment include Paul Barnett and F. Allen Weatherholt for Cumberland; Louis Fatkin of Westernport for juvenile magistrate; Harold C. Naughton for substitute magistrate; Frank T. Kelly and Edward P. Flanagan for Frostburg; Browne Kooken for Westernport; Joseph McKenzie for Barton; James McPartland for Lonaconing; John Meyers for Midland; Thomas Stephens for Mt. Savage; Thomas Barton for Cresaptown; Ned Hose for Oldtown and Russell Nierman for Flintstone.

Present two-year terms expire May 1.

Tomorrow Is Friday 13th

And there will be only one other such Friday during the year. That will be during October.

Frostburg Man Robbed On Street

A Frostburg man was attacked by two persons who took money from his billfold late Tuesday night, police of that community said.

Emory Layman of 15 Beall Street was going home about 11:30 p. m. when he was attacked on Broadway.

Police said the two persons jumped the man, who was unable to get a description of either one.

Mr. Layman said he was thrown to the ground and his arms were pinned down by the two persons, who went through his pockets and took money from his billfold.

Woman Hurt In Auto Crash

A 33-year-old Lonaconing woman was hospitalized last night with injuries sustained in a one-car accident on State Route 55 about a mile south of Clarysville.

Mrs. Elsie Doris Bell, of 64 Douglas Avenue, suffered bruises about her body, according to state police, who said she was unconscious a short while after the accident at 7:25 p.m.

Attaches at Miners Hospital said the woman was in shock when admitted to the hospital for X-rays and observation. Her condition is "good," they said.

Trooper Leonard F. Glenn, investigating officer, said the accident occurred when Mrs. Bell was traveling alone in a northerly direction on the highway.

A charge of failure to keep to the right of the center of the highway has been placed against the woman, police said.

Delivery Starts Today On New Phone Books

Delivery of more than 32,000 1961 telephone directories to residences and businesses in Allegany County, Ridgeley and nearby Pennsylvania will begin today.

The continued growth in this area is reflected in the new directory, as it shows an increase of 26 pages and over 2,000 more listings than the 1960 directory which was distributed last January.

Local persons who have been hired to deliver the new directories will start distributing them to homes and businesses this morning. These persons also will pick up the old directories when the new ones are delivered.

It is expected that the delivery will take about four or five days.

During the past several years, the Allegany County telephone book has grown by over 10,000 listings to the present number of over 2,000 listings in the new directory.

Phone company officials suggest that subscribers go through their present books and remove all notes and personal papers they sometimes file in the telephone directory.

Because there have been numerous changes in listings and numbers, customers should look up all numbers in the new book before calling. Over 22,000 changes will be reflected in the 1961 book.

One significant new listing in the new directory is the number to dial to obtain the correct time of day. By dialing PA 2-8282, telephone customers may secure the correct time at any time.

Another feature of the new book is that each number contains just two letters and five numbers. Previously many of the various exchanges were spelled out. The new format makes the phone numbers easier to read.

Blood Bank Says Thanks To CUF

The current "Thank You" theme of County United Fund activities takes on special meaning here today—the 13th anniversary of the establishment of the first Red Cross regional blood center in the United States.

Fresh from its most successful campaign to date, CUF embraces three Red Cross chapters that have saved nearly a million dollars in blood charges for area residents, providing free blood in emergencies that would cost an average of $35 a pint in areas where there is no free blood bank.

All three chapters — Allegany County, Mineral County and Piedmont — are associated with the Johnstown regional blood center, which is patterned after the first one established at Rochester, N. Y., on January 12, 1948.

"This is a good time to pass on to the 20,000 supporters of County United Fund the thanks that pour into the three area Red Cross chapters," Winfield H. Adam, CUF executive director, said last night. "Throughout the year, volunteer Red Cross workers, volunteer donors and volunteer givers unite to save lives as well as money for all residents of Allegany and Mineral counties who are in need of blood service."

University Control Of Frostburg State Aired

ANNAPOLIS (AP)—Conversion of Frostburg State Teachers College into a Western Maryland branch of the University of Maryland was being mentioned Wednesday as a possible alternative to a broader, highly controversial plan for university expansion.

Administration sources said the idea is being discussed primarily in Western Maryland and has not yet been presented directly to Gov. Tawes.

Whether legislation will be introduced to carry out the conversion probably will depend on the amount of support the idea gets from political and economic leaders in Allegany County.

The State Department of Education is certain to oppose the proposal as it did a broader program recommended by a study commission headed by Edwin Warfield III, Harford County publisher.

The Warfield plan, now deferred by the administration for further study, suggested conversion of the colleges at Frostburg, Salisbury and Towson into university branches.

Meanwhile, the university's Board of Regents has tentatively decided to establish an undergraduate branch in the Baltimore area.

Creation of branches in Baltimore and Frostburg would accomplish piecemeal the essential aims of the Warfield recommendations.
